INTRODUCTION

These reports are intended for a general, nonspecialist audience. They run the gamut of the arts and sciences, historical and current events, and should provide the reader with useful introductions to given topics. May they encourage a few happy hours of suggestive thought!

MONUMENTS OF SHAME

They span the length and breadth of the West. Berlin. Chemnitz. Trier. Bilbao. Tampere. Turku. Kotka. Vittsjo. Copenhagen. Herning. Enschede. Gelsenkirchen. Capri. Cavriago. Athens. Montpellier. Belfast. London. Seattle. New York City. These are locales hosting monuments to Karl Marx or Vladimir Lenin, towns and neighborhoods commemorating leaders of the number one mass religion of our time, whose followers flowing from the moral sewers of society enslaved and killed 100 million people across the planet. Mysticism. Collectivism. Tribalism. Human sacrifice. The rejection of the Enlightenment. The denial of the rights, freedom and dignity of the individual. These are the tenets of Marxism, and every monument to Marx and Lenin in the West at once pays tribute to them and symbolizes their overwhelming popularity with the Western cultural and political establishment. In the West, in the birthplace of freedom in modern times, in the culture which produced the Scientific Revolution, the Industrial Revolution, the Age of Discovery and the Age of Reason, monuments have been constructed rejecting this heritage and substituting dark powers in its place, and signifying the inglorious implosion and end of the line of civilization. These are monuments of treason, daggers stabbing free societies in the back thrust by masses grown degenerate, discontented and hostile to liberal values, silent watchmen of a terrifying movement of political and cultural regression. These monuments reflect the state of the West today and encapsulate the process of moral death the West has undergone. The process started in the twentieth century and in the twenty first century has spiraled into completion. Built and honored by the masses, these monuments are displays of cultural obscenity without equal in modern times. They are eternal preservations and reminders of the tragedy that the citizens of the West, six centuries after the dissolution of the Dark Ages, have voted to return to the Dark Ages, this time commemorated by monuments, not to Jesus or Mary, but to Karl Marx and Vladimir Lenin. The monuments to Marx and Lenin are monuments to the masses who put them there, visit them by the millions with their families and friends, take selfies in front of them, give speeches before them, and agitate for an endless expansion of the welfare, regulatory regime communism seeks to bring about. The West Today. Look at the West today and see a new Axis Power comprised of two totalitarian movements, joining forces to defeat their common enemy, the liberal Enlightenment. See an alliance between Marxism and Islam, the first advocating human enslavement in the name of a Gender, Race and Class monster, and the second advocating human enslavement in the name of Allah in Heaven, reduce cities to wastelands and streets into rivers of blood. See two death cults, the first marching under the flag of the Soviet Red Star and its race and gender offshoots, and the second marching under the flag of the Muslim Star and Crescent, join forces to terrorize free societies. See two religions of mass destruction and mushroom clouds, rejecting reason, empiricism and the scientific method, bring down an apocalypse and fill the air with moral and political poison: "On Thursday's Mark Levin Show, Israeli Ambassador to the United States Yechiel Leiter discussed the killing of two Israeli Embassy staffers on Wednesday and stated there is an 'evil nexus of Marxism and Islamism' where 'extremes find a natural connection and they're very totalitarian in nature and they're also very bloody in nature.' Leiter said, 'We call this evil nexus of Marxism and Islamism the red-green alliance. And it is, on the surface, a very strange kind of alliance, you're talking about the extreme left and the extreme right coming together. But extremes find a natural connection and they're very totalitarian in nature and they're also very bloody in nature. Marxism was responsible for the murder of 100 million people in the 20th century and Islamism today is absolutely committed to the death cult that's emanating from Iran, in particular, not exclusively, but in particular.' He continued, 'And it lends some credence and understanding to Israel's insistence that Iran doesn't get a nuclear bomb, because if they do, they will use it. There's no restraint at all, whatsoever, with these people. It's a vicious death cult that doesn't really consider how many people they take down with them in their apocalyptic vision of the future.' " (Israeli Ambassador To US On

Killing Of Embassy Staff: There's 'Evil Nexus Of Marxism And Islamism' by Ian Hanchett). The West Today. Look at the West today and see the channels of mass communication blackened by Marxist political bias. See media organizations set up megatowers for the transmission of Marxist propaganda. See tax dollars fund corporations dedicated to communist broadcasting. See the mass media reject fairness and accuracy in favor of far left partisanship. See the mass media proclaim that communist broadcasting fulfills an essential public service and is one hundred percent American. See the mass media proclaim that communist broadcasting prepares children for success in school and life as it fills the people with the desire and ability to do great things: "President Donald Trump has signed an executive order halting funds to PBS and NPR, claiming the taxpayer funded organizations have exercised political bias. The order directs the Corporation for Public Broadcasting (CPB) and other agencies 'to cease Federal funding for NPR and PBS' while demanding they seek to halt other sources of public funding to the organizations. Per the order: 'At the very least, Americans have the right to expect that if their tax dollars fund public broadcasting at all, they fund only fair, accurate, unbiased, and nonpartisan news coverage. No media outlet has a constitutional right to taxpayer subsidies, and the Government is entitled to determine which categories of activities to subsidize. The CPB's governing statute reflects principles of impartiality: the CPB may not 'contribute to or otherwise support any political party.' The CPB fails to abide by these principles to the extent it subsidizes NPR and PBS. Which viewpoints NPR and PBS promote does not matter. What does matter is that neither entity presents a fair, accurate, or unbiased portrayal of current events to taxpaying citizens. I therefore instruct the CPB Board of Directors (CPB Board) and all executive departments and agencies (agencies) to cease Federal funding for NPR and PBS.' According to the Associated Press, NPR and PBS receive roughly 'half a billion dollars in public money through the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, and have been preparing for the possibility of stiff cuts since Trump's election.' 'The Corporation for Public Broadcasting sued Trump earlier this week over his move to fire three members of its five person board, contending that the president was exceeding his authority and that the move would deprive the board of a quorum needed to conduct business,' noted the report. In a statement last month, Paula Kerger, president and CEO of PBS, said that the Trump administration stripping it of federal funds would 'disrupt the essential service PBS and local member stations provide to the American people.' 'There's nothing more American than PBS, and our work is only possible because of the bipartisan support we have always received from Congress,' she said. 'This public-private partnership allows us to help prepare millions of children for success in school and in life and also supports enriching and inspiring programs of the highest quality.' " (Trump Signs Executive Order Halting Federal Funds To NPR, PBS by Paul Bois). The West Today. Look at the West today and see antiMarxist online speech banned on the grounds that it is digital violence. See the online critics of Marxism deprived of their privacy and harassed. See the proclamation that there is no right to offend the advocates of gender, race and class politics, and the offenders' online posts must be deleted and their accounts blocked. See government control over social media platforms justified in the name of protecting civil liberties. See the enactment of a Network Enforcement Act marked by severe restrictions on online speech including banning of all speech deemed to be politically incorrect. See antiMarxist speech censored as hate speech. See antiMarxist speech censored as criminal speech. See antiMarxist speech censored as illegal content. See the abolition of a cyberspace free from the reach of totalitarian law. See the abolition of free speech on the internet and the establishment on an online Marxist ideological echo chamber: "The German government is looking to grant powers to courts to block the social media accounts of citizens who engage in 'digital violence'. Earlier this week, the Federal Ministry of Justice called for the creation of a 'law against digital violence' under which German courts could ban social media accounts of individual users and even force companies to unmask their identity if the account was anonymous. The proposal would target those who are deemed to be 'notorious violators in the digital space,' particularly anonymous trolls, the Tagesschau broadcaster reported. The ministry said that the drastic measure of a court banning an account should only be taken if other methods, such as censoring an indivdual post, have been exhausted. Ulf Buermeyer, a lawyer and chairman of the dubiously named Society for Civil Liberties, celebrated the government's censorious plans, saying: 'Why should you be able to offend someone?' Buermeyer argued that the measure was necessary as merely deleting an offensive post has little impact on deterrence as it often has spread widely on the internet before being taken down and therefore blocking accounts may be more impactful in preventing such speech." (Police State: German Govt Seeks Power To Ban Social Media Accounts Over 'Digital Violence' by Kurt Zindulka). The West Today. In the aftermath of World War II and the defeat of the Axis Powers, no statues of Hitler were left standing anywhere in the West. Hitler was a student of Marx who adopted his master's tribalist methods, framework and view of history, and substituted international Aryan race war for international proletarian class war as the goal of revolution. In the twenty first century, the international proletarian Marxists and their race and gender offshoots, members of a movement which committed the worst crimes against humanity ever recorded, are the faces of the masses and the establishment. Their ubiquitous monuments to Marx are the symptoms of a plague. They have been stricken by fever and delirium. Their moral, cultural and spiritual disease is fatal.

THREE THEORIES OF TRUTH, ONE THEORY OF SANITY

The Madhouse is a world famous oil painting by the Spanish artist Francesco Goya. It was produced between 1812 and 1819 and based on what Goya saw at the Zaragoza mental hospital in Aragon, Spain. He saw a nightmare world of grotesque behavior roiling beneath a barred window high up on the wall. Madness. Behavior caused by abnormal mental patterns, behavior violating moral norms, making the individual a danger to himself or to others. Goy's terrifying depiction is among the symbols of a culture born in Europe around 1000 AD, born when clocks high atop church steeples were striking midnight. It is a midnight culture, a will culture, a romanticist culture, a Germanic culture, a Northern European culture, a culture in which reason and sanity have been exchanged for infinite subjectivity, a culture born in an unholy pact between a discontented Doctor Faustus and the Devil meeting at the crossroads. This Faustian culture of the West is distinguished from its diametrical opposite, the culture of the Greeks and Romans, which emerged in the noonday world of Southern Europe thousands of years before the West was born in the midnight hour. Its shining symbol was Apollo, god of light, understanding, healing, wellness, order, perfection, a god bringing the sun across the sky every morning. The dichotomy between the culture of Apollo and the culture of Faust is the most terrifying dichotomy known to man, for it is the dichotomy between sanity and insanity, and it shows the heights of flourishing and the depths of danger of which the human mind is capable. The Faustian culture of the West has brought forth miracles as well as madness. It has brought forth scientific revolutions, industrial revolutions, technological revolutions, ages of exploration and discovery, and an unFaustian Age of Enlightenment which championed Classical common sense beliefs and empirical methods of investigation. But its madness is highlighted in the realm of philosophy in its advocacy of theories of truth which have no relation to reality. In the history of Classical and Western Cultures, three theories of truth have appeared: the correspondence theory of truth, the coherence theory of truth and the pragmatic theory of truth. Proclaiming that truth is the correspondence between thought and reality, the first theory alone is a theory of sanity and was championed in Classical Culture, while the others are theories of insanity and are championed in the West. Correspondence Theory of Truth. Listen to the preeminent Apollonian philosopher champion the sane theory of truth. Listen to Aristotle proclaim truth as correspondence: "To say of what is that it is not, or of what is not that it is, is false, while to say of what is that it is, and of what is not that it is not, is true." (Metaphysics). "What makes statements truth are external situations and facts." (Categories). "Thoughts are likenesses of things." (On Interpretaion). Listen to the Greek philosopher Carneades: "A statement is true when it is in accord with the object presented, and false when it is in discord with it." (quoted by Sextus Empiricus in Against The Professors). Coherence Theory of Truth. Now descend into the midnight world of Faust and hear a proclamation of insanity in the theory that truth is purely internal and is determined by its coherence within a mental system. Listen to the preeminent Faustian philosopher Immanuel Kant champion truth as coherence and not correspondence. Listen to Kant proclaim that space and time are purely subjective: "Space and time are mere representations and not things in themselves. They are only subjective forms of perception, not determinations given for themselves or conditions of objects as things in themselves." (Critique Of Pure Reason). Listen to Kant proclaim that truth is the conformance of reality to thought and not thought to reality, and thus there is no such thing as physical reality: "Hitherto it has been assumed that all our knowledge must conform to objects. But all attempts to extend our knowledge of objects by establishing something in regard to them apriori, by means of concepts independently of experience, have on this assumption ended in failure. We must therefore find out whether we may not have more success in the tasks of metaphysics if we suppose that objects must conform to our knowledge." (Critique Of Pure Reason). Listen to the coherentists' proclamation that truth belongs to internal systems and not to reality. Truth belongs to mental interconnections. Truth belongs to a living, mystical, mental Whole. Truth belongs to the Human Spirit. Truth belongs to the Absolute. Truth belongs to God's mind. Truth is disconnected from reality. Truth has no relation to the empirical world. Truth has no relation to the world of common sense. The world of empiricism and common sense is unreal. What we call physical objects are mere products of our perceptual powers; they are created by human vision; and man is blind because he has eyes and is blind because he sees: "The coherence theory of truth gained a strong following in the nineteenth century, partly due to the influence of Kant and Hegel, and especially in the thought of the British philosophers influenced by them, known as the British Idealists. One of its implications is that beliefs do not belong to whole systems in the way. The coherence theory of truth gained a strong following in the nineteenth century, partly due to the influence of Kant and Hegel, and especially in the thought of the British philosophers influenced by them, known as the British Idealists. One of its implications is that beliefs do not belong to whole systems in the way that pebbles lie on a beach, disconnected from each other and independent of their neighbors. Rather, they belong organically to whole systems or theories of the world in the way that a hand belongs to an arm or an arm to a body: the interlocking system has the character of a living body, an organic whole in which each part gains its value precisely by its being a part of the whole. This idea, called the holism of belief systems, diverts attention from the single sentence expressing a single truth, to whole theories or systems of belief. As an illustration, think of learning elementary arithmetic. You do not learn, one at a time, that thirteen is greater than eleven, or that twenty six is an even number. You learn a whole system and a whole set of interconnected implications and applications, and then, as Wittgenstein put it, 'light dawns gradually over the whole.' In nineteenth century hands the coherence theory had a semireligious flavor: ideal coherence, it was thought, could belong only to the thoughts of an infinite mind, a mind capable of encompassing an infinity of interlocking beliefs, something like God’s mind, which the idealists christened the Absolute. Anything like it could arrive only at the endpoint of the progress of the Human Spirit, but like the endpoint of the rainbow that could never be reached by mere mortals. These thoughts might reintroduce a kind of pessimism or skepticism. Coherence is the best we can achieve, but our coherence might not be that of the gods. Again the idea arises that we might be faltering along on the wrong track, disconnected from the real world. The thought is that however much we may be at home with it, the empirical world of common sense and science is but the appearance of a hidden reality of a different nature. In Kant’s jargon the ordinary world of chairs and tables, cars and buses, is 'empirically real'–it is what our senses tell us is real–but 'transcendentally ideal'–the product of the way our minds structure a reality of which we can form no idea, since in forming any such idea we would be back deploying the structuring powers of the mind." (Coherence by Simon Blackburn). Pragmatic Theory of Truth. Now listen to the Faustian theory of pragmatism proclaim that truth is purely internal and is determined by human needs, interests, wishes and desires. Listen to Charles Sanders Peirce proclaim that truth is a product of the community and not reality: "The real, then, is that which, sooner or later, information and reasoning would finally result in, and which is therefore independent of the vagaries of me and you. Thus, the very origin of the conception of reality shows that this conception essentially involves the notion of a COMMUNITY, without definite limits, and capable of a definite increase of knowledge." (Collected Papers, Charles Sanders Peirce). Listen to John Dewey proclaim that the mind creates, controls and directs reality: "Inquiry is the controlled or directed transformation of an indeterminate situation into one that is so determinate in its constituent distinctions and relations as to convert the elements of the original situation into a unified whole." (Logic: The Theory Of Inquiry). Listen to Dewey proclaim that truth is a product of social consequences and cash value: "Mr Pierce explained that he took the term pragmatic from Kant, in order to denote empirical consequences. What is important is that the consequences should be specific. When he [James] said that general notions must 'cash in', he meant of course that they must be translatable into verifiable specific things." (Essays In Experimental Logic). Listen to Jurgen Habermas proclaim that truth is a product of democracy and is whatever the majority says it is: "Encouraged by my friend Apel, I also studied Peirce, as well as Mead and Dewey. From the outset I viewed American pragmatism as the third productive reply to Hegel, after Marx and Kierkegaard, as the radical-democratic branch of Young Hegelianism, so to speak. Ever since, I have relied on this American version of the philosophy of praxis when the problem arises of compensating for the weaknesses of Marxism with respect to democratic theory." (A Philosophico-Political Profile by Jurgen Habermas, New Left Review, May-June, 1985). Theories of Insanity. In the shadowland called Western philosophy, the mind is in a permanent Faustian eclipse. It denies that truth exists. It proclaims that what is called truth is purely internal, proceeding either from internal mental systems or from human wishes and desires, and is on no account related to reality. Common sense exposes these theories of truth as inconsistent. It exposes the inconsistency of the claim of the coherence theory of truth to be simply and unqualifiedly true, or true by correspondence, and not merely true by coherence. It exposes the inconsistency of the claim of the pragmatic theory of truth to be simply and unqualifiedly true, or true by correspondence, and not merely true by virtue of human wishes and desires. It exposes the insanity of these coherence and pragmatic theories of subjective truth. It exposes the insanity at the basis of the culture which produced them. It exposes the insanity of the Faustian West's pact with the Devil.

MONSTER ON CAMPUS

From the beginning of the USSR, education was given one of the first places in the propaganda system. Because education played the role of the primary link in the process of socialization of the individual, filling it with ideological propaganda made it possible to raise future generations as committed communists. By the end of the 1930s, both a new education system and new teaching methods were formed, in accordance with the new ideology. Changes introduced by Anton Makarenko played an important role in this process. In Makarenko's opinion, education and upbringing should be carried out only in and with the help of the collective. Only the collective is capable of forming a full fledged personality, revealing its potential and making it a conscious part of society. Individual interests should always be subordinated to collective interests, both in education and in life. (Integration Of Communist Propaganda In The USSR Education System In The 1920s: Historical And Political Aspects by Andrii Hrytsenko and Oleksii Mozghovyi). Propaganda in schools. Ideological control over the classroom.

The primacy of the collective over the individual hammered into the minds of students. The sacrifice of reason and science on the altar of a new religion of the party and the proletariat. These were nails in the coffin of education in Russia after the Communist Revolution, cannons of mental destruction aimed at students in the new Soviet Union. The collapse of the Communist Bloc in 1991 was a meaningless event for the cause of education because Marx had never died in the West. His creed of class hatred, class war and rejection of the Enlightenment had laid the basis for the number mass gutter religion of our time, and it assumed control over the Western cultural and political establishment. Thirty five years after Communist Bloc schools stopped teaching Marxism in subjects in the curriculum, Marxists are alive and well throughout the West and have left their imprint at every level of education, from primary schools through to universities. Derived from the Latin phrase, universitas magistrorum et scholarium, which means "community of teachers and scholars," the university in the twenty first century has disgraced its name and mission and become a degree granting institution graduating votaries of a monster. The monster is a series of gorgons springing from a single body, and is a latter day manifestation of Marxism called Gender, Race and Class Politics. The monster is rampaging across the West in the twenty first century, capturing higher education, making college campuses unsafe for civilized students, and transforming the campus into a sworn enemy of the traditional Western liberal community of teachers and scholars. In classrooms, lecture halls, graduation ceremonies and convocation days throughout the West, the monster reads out its manifesto and seeks to consolidate the ideological echo chamber which is today's university. Attack on Academia. The monster proclaims that a progressive university rejects liberal education in favor of Marxist education. It rejects the impartial pursuit of truth in favor of far left partisan inquiry. It rejects science in favor of far left religious indoctrination. It rejects the humanities and social sciences in favor of a gender, race and class based curriculum. It rejects liberal ideas, institutions, peoples, nations and civilizations. It brings down the black hand of censorship on criticisms of Marxism. It rejects liberal principles of fairness and due process and expels male students accused of sexual assault on the grounds that accusations amount to evidence, and males accused of sexual assault are automatically guilty. It supports Hamas terror attacks on Israel and allows Hamas rioters to occupy grounds and buildings, and harass and beat up Jewish students. It supports the destruction of Israel on the grounds that it is the only nation in the Middle East protecting individual rights. It promotes a global jihad and intifada against America, Europe, Israel and the West. It supports Muslim nations in their war against liberal democracy. It excludes the voices of Enlightenment freedom from the curriculum. It bans antiMarxist opinions and points of view from campus. It prevents libertarians and conservatives from entering, graduating, becoming professors and receiving tenure. It rejects viewpoint diversity in favor Marxist ideological lockstep. It seeks to implement the single, overriding imperative of Marxist education, which is the destruction of civilization: "Those paying attention over, say, the previous 40 years know that American colleges and universities long ago departed from their core mission, which is to provide undergraduates a liberal education and to foster scholarship driven by the disinterested pursuit of the truth. The public, however, has been inclined to downplay reports of faculty and administration misconduct: censorship; kangaroo courts for those accused of sexual misconduct; progressive indoctrination laced throughout the humanities and social sciences; and abandonment of basic courses in American ideas and institutions, Western civilization, and nonWestern peoples and nations. For decades, parents, alumni, wealthy donors, the media, and government officials assured themselves that matters could not be as bad as critics, mostly conservatives, contended. Besides, a selective college or university degree conferred social status and provided access to the top echelons of law, medicine, finance, corporate management, the media, entertainment, and government. Since Iran backed Hamas' October 7, 2023, massacres in Israel, university dysfunction has captured headlines. Countless videos displayed the lawlessness of proHamas campus protestors threatening Jews while trespassing, erecting encampments, and taking over buildings. And House hearings exposed the public to university administrators' indulgence of protestors' intimidation and harassment of Jewish students. As the price of annual tuition, room, and board at selective schools approaches $100,000, reasonable people wonder whether the costs of elite education exceed the benefits. The proHamas protests also revealed that the sympathy for the jihadists' heinous ambitions to wipe out the Jewish state stemmed from a toxic mix of antisemitism and antiAmericanism. The protesters' frequent call to 'globalize the Intifada' summoned the faithful to overturn the American political system as Hamas aims to eradicate Israel. In many protesters' eyes, prominent among America's numerous sins was support for Israel–the world's only Jewish nation and, notwithstanding immense national security challenges, the only rights protecting democracy in the Middle East. With a population of approximately 10 million, the tiny Jewish state coexists in a volatile region with around 15 Muslim nations whose combined population is over 470 million. Conservative critics of American universities saw the disgraceful post October 7 spectacle on campuses as egregious additional evidence–not that they thought the pre October 7 evidence was anything short of devastating –of higher education's acute deformations. Among these, they had long maintained, were the well documented dearth of conservatives among the faculty, and the less well documented but more fundamental exclusion of conservative perspectives and opinions from the college curriculum. To counteract the gross imbalance, conservatives, well before the post October 7 campus tumult, joined forces with the small and declining numbers of old fashioned liberals in the professoriate to rally around 'viewpoint diversity.' This was a matter of fairness–of overcoming the ill informed stigma that campus majorities attached to conservatives and conservatism and removing obstacles faced by conservatives to graduate study, faculty appointment, and tenure. But enhancing viewpoint diversity was about more than fairness to conservatives. It was also an imperative of liberal education." (Beware Rationalizations For Leaving Universities As They Are by Peter Berkowitz). Attack on Academia. Look at the Western Marxist establishment and see it proclaim that a progressive university rejects objective truth, goodness and beauty in favor of politicized truth, goodness and beauty. It blocks the transmission of liberal ideals and traditions. It encourages student radicals, revolutionaries and rebels without a cause. It teaches students to overthrow liberal government and the liberal way of life. It rejects secular humanities programs in favor of Marxist catechisms. It teaches students that the culmination of Western culture is Marxist, antiEnlightenment, antiliberal, gender, race and class culture. It teaches students that all truth is relative to gender, race and class, and there are as many cultures, ideas and values as there are genders, races and classes, no one of which may be held to be more correct than any others. It organizes student marches against academic freedom and the right to dissent from the Marxist party line. It teaches students that the election of Barack Obama was the greatest event in American history because for the first time an apostle of gender, race and class politics achieved the highest office, and the people were told that the creators of businesses did not create their businesses but society did, that there is something bigger and greater than the self, which is society, to which they must sacrifice themselves, and that healthcare is a human right which must be subsidized on the backs of the producers of wealth. It teaches students that capitalism is a regime of white racist and male sexist oppression. It teaches students that individuals are not individuals but members of gender, race and class groups, and that a progressive society is a tribal dictatorship in the hands of women, nonwhites and the poor, dedicated to the destruction of liberal justice and jurisprudence. Attack on Academia. It is the oldest university in the world. Emerging at the time Western Culture emerged, around 1000 AD, it taught Roman law and the sciences. It educated Nicholas Copernicus and all the great Renaissance mathematicians. Its shining motto, Nourishing mother of studies, signaled the commencement of liberal education in the West. One thousand years after its founding, the University of Bologna exists in name only. Joining the ranks of major universities through the West, it has become a school of Marxist theology and world revolution.

JAGUAR CRASHES

Over a century ago, in the seaside town of Blackpool in Lancashire, England, two ambitious young men met and started a business. It was an automotive business manufacturing motorcycle sidecars, and it would race into a legacy which gave the world an icon. In 1933, Jaguar Cars was born from its predecessor, the Swallow Sidecar Company, and burned through streets, fierce and bright, blazing paths of glory. Jaguar. A symbol of automotive, luxury, engineering and performance at their finest. Jaguar. Like the animal it was named after, a symbol of grace, elegance, power and speed. Jaguar. A symbol of British automotive innovation and excellence, a holder of royal warrants from Queen Elizabeth and King Charles, and a manufacturer of cars for the British Prime Minister. In the twenty first century, this legend on wheels has crashed into a Berlin Wall of far left politics and been shot to pieces by the watchtowers of the party line. In the twenty first century, Jaguar has immolated its brand and product line on the altars of a religion, the number one gutter religion of our time, a religion of the envious, the hate filled, the discontented and the degenerate, and been reduced to a charred remnant of its former self. In the twenty first century, Jaguar is Jaguar in name only and is one more manifestation of the civilizational collapse coming out of the popular assembly lines of Marxism. In the twenty first century, Jaguar has been relaunched, rebranded and become Jaguar Type 00. The zeros represent green movement politics. They represent the new zero emissions electric motor, and represent the old Jaguar slate rubbed out, reduced to zero, and signifying "a whole new lineage of Jaguars." Jaguar. Look at Jaguar in the twenty first century and see a Marxist rebrand. See a Marxist concept car. See an advertising campaign selling Marxist politics in place of cars. See car sales reduced to near zero and confined to Marxist diehards. See a company sell Marxism as liberating fashion, lifestyle and progress. See a company reject Jaguar traditions in the name of Marxist boldness. See a company promote androgynous models and transgender women in place of cars. See a company condemn the critics of Marxism and wokeism as avatars of hatred and intolerance: "Jaguar's vehicle sales in Europe dropped by 97.5 percent year over year in April 2025, with just 49 units registered compared to 1,961 the year prior, in the wake of its controversial rebrand. The iconic British marque revealed its new concept car, the Type 00 (pronounced zero zero), to a mixed reaction last November, as Breitbart News reported, with an advertising campaign that failed to showcase even one single vehicle. Now the marketplace has made its judgment and it doesn't look good for Jaguar. According to figures from the European Automobile Manufacturers' Association (AECA), the company registered just 49 new vehicles in April 2025 compared to 1,961 units sold in the same month last year. Year to date sales from January to April also slumped, dropping 75.1 percent with just 2,665 motors sold. Globally, Jaguar sold just 26,862 vehicles for the 2024/25 financial year–an 85 percent drop compared to 2018. The sales dip was driven by Jaguar's ditching its heritage roots towards a 'lifestyle focused, fashion forward brand.' Jaguar's managing director responded to the backlash the company received over its new advertisement featuring androgynous models but not a single car. He claimed the campaign was 'bold' and never intended to be woke, adding the company's message was lost in a 'blaze of intolerance' by hurtful critics on social media. 'If we play in the same way that everybody else does, we'll just get drowned out. So we shouldn't turn up like an auto brand,' Jaguar managing director Rawdon Glover told Financial Times." (Go Woke, Go Broke: Jaguar Sales Crash By 97% After Controversial Rebrand by Simon Kent). Jaguar. Look at Jaguar in the twenty first century and see woke ideology on wheels. See the slogan Copy Nothing Except Marxism. See Marxism promoted by men dressed as women. See Marxism promoted in the name of exuberance. See Marxism promoted in the name of extraordinary living. See Marxism promoted in the name of breaking molds. See Marxism promoted in the name of modernism. See Marxism promoted in the name of effecting a great leap forward. See Marxism promoted in the name of plunging into an exciting new era. See Marxism promoted by electric vehicle designs and battery cars powered by the enemies of freedom and civilization: "The Jaguar CEO is stepping down months after leading a controversial woke rebrand campaign for the auto company. Jaguar Land Rover CEO Adrian Mardell is set to retire after three decades at the luxury car company and serving as CEO for three years, a spokesperson for the automaker announced on Thursday, Reuters reported. The British car brand turned heads last year with its release of a new ad, which featured a reimagined logo under the slogan Copy Nothing. The ad featured androgynous models in brightly colored, over the top outfits, including one man wearing a dress, along with other slogans such as 'create exuberant,' 'live vivid,' 'delete ordinary' and 'break molds.' The ad did not feature a car throughout its entire 30 second run. The video blew up on social media, drawing tens of thousands of comments and nearly 47 million views in 24 hours. Shortly after the ad premiered, X users piled onto the company for releasing what they called a 'Bud Light 2.0' campaign by appearing to focus on wokeness and modernism over selling cars. 'This just made me want to sell my Jaguar and I don't even own a Jaguar,' conservative corporate activist Robby Starbuck joked. Columnist Jon Gabriel wrote, 'This is so the wrong timing for this. I can understand the corporate suite being conned into this in 2022, but you have completely misread the moment. Bud Light 2.0.' Jaguar defended the ad in a statement to FOX Business at the time. 'Our brand relaunch for Jaguar is a bold and imaginative reinvention and, as expected, it has attracted attention and debate. As proud custodians at such a remarkable point in Jaguar's history, we have preserved iconic symbols while taking a dramatic leap forward. The brand reveal is only the first step in this exciting new era, and we look forward to sharing more on Jaguar's transformation in the coming days and weeks,' it said. Soon after, Jaguar took heat with the release of its new EV design that was called a pink Batmobile.' The Jaguar commercial, which was posted to the car company's social media on Tuesday, showed only androgynous individuals clad in bizarre attire that would hardly fit in at a fashion show. The advertisement also failed to showcase even one single vehicle from the luxury car company. The Jaguar ad also featured what appears to be a man wearing a dress, One social media user reacted to the commercial, declaring, '10 [years] ago: Jags are badass muscle cars for villains. Today: Yass queen gay race communism.' Jaguar announced in a Monday press release that, 'A new era begins today for Jaguar. A completely transformed Jaguar brand recaptures an ethos to Copy Nothing that can trace its roots back to the words of its founder, Sir William Lyons.' The luxury vehicles company explained that on December 2 at Miami Art Week, 'Jaguar will present Copy Nothing, the first global public installation for its new brand that will include the physical manifestation of its Exuberant Modernism creative philosophy, in a Design Vision Concept.' 'This dramatic, unmistakable and unexpected expression of what it means to Copy Nothing will be a preview of the fearless approach to come from Jaguar,' the company continued. 'Jaguar's presence in Miami will establish its advocacy for artistic expression, in all its forms,' Jaguar added. 'Through a series of meticulously curated gallery spaces over two locations, Jaguar will share its

See Jaguar reject the jaguar in favor of a geometrical figure J, signifying the death of a logo shot down by Marxist rifles: "Jaguar Land Rover (JLR) is looking to cut 500 management jobs as it copes with falling sales and brand management issues in the wake of its much maligned woke repositioning efforts. The swinging job cuts acome in the wake of Jaguar sparking outrage and disbelief in November when it launched a glossy ad campaign with bright colors and catwalk models. The controversial ad excluded any images of its sleek sports cars as it touted its transition to a fully electric, ultraluxury company. The scrapping of the well known big cat badge in favor of a geometric J design also drew fierce criticism along with laughter." (*Surprise! COMMUNISTS AND FASCISTS FEED ON WESTERN CARRION

Germany, October 29, 1918. The commencement of a revolution to overthrow the German Empire and establish a liberal democratic society. Defeating both the empire and an armed communist uprising, the German people establish the Weimar Republic with a liberal constitution. March 23, 1933. The passage of the Enabling Act which gave Adolf Hitler the power to make laws unchecked by the president, the parliament or the constitution, and brought about the descent of the nation into a national socialist totalitarian regime. Between these two points, political violence shot its way into every corner of German society and left no home, school, office or business untouched. In Germany for fourteen years, four months, three weeks and two days, two camps battled in the streets for control over society, and bloodied people and places with the bullets holes of fanaticism. Two camps, both proceeding from a common Marxist base, one camp fighting in the name of the original Marxist proletarian ideology and the other fighting in the name of a racist development of the original, fighting in the name of a neoMarxist Aryan ideology. Two camps, one camp fighting in the name of class hate, class war and class revolution, and the other camp fighting in the name of race hate, race war and race revolution. In the time between the German Revolution and the passage of the Enabling Act, Germany was a battleground of two Marxist armies, the redshirts and the brownshirts, until the violence finally ceased with the victory of the brownshirts. In the twenty first century, the nightmare of Weimar Germany has spread its dark wings across the West as the two Marxist camps have reappeared in full force, are elected to high political office, dominate the channels of mass communication, and tear up cities and streets. In the twenty first century, the West's rejection of reason has written its final chapter, entitled The Victory of Communism and Fascism, and the crash of civilization is echoing in every nation on earth. Look at the West in the twenty first century and see two Marxist horseman of the apocalypse lower the curtain on the legacies of the Enlightenment. In the twentieth century, the communist movement which fought in Weimar Germany mutated into a three gorgon monster called Gender, Race and Class Politics, and this monster has spread across the West in the twenty first century. It confronts Hitler's Marxist based national socialists in a struggle for power and supremacy. Gender, Race and

Class Marxism. Look at the successors of the Weimar communists and see the denial of the existence of sex chromosomes as determinants of human gender. See the denial of biological reality. See the proclamation that sex can be changed by human will and individuals who identify as members of the opposite sex are in fact those members. See the proclamation that transgender women, or men who identify as women, are as real as biological women, and transgender men, or women who identify as men, are as real as biological men. See the proclamation that men in dressed as women and appearing as women are real women. See the rejection of liberal values in favor of gay and lesbian propaganda. See the proclamation that psychotic individuals who do not accept the reality of their biological sex must be granted legal recognition as members of the opposite sex. See the rejection of human universalism and individual rights in favor of the special rights of gays, lesbians, bisexuals and transgenders. See the mass media, the entertainment industry and multinational corporations become weapons of a Marxist gender, race and class culture seeking to dominate and destroy liberal government and institutions: "It's been more than two years since Anheuser-Busch annihilated its top selling Bud Light by hiring a transvestite to hype the brand, and the brand has not recovered. Dylan Mulvaney, an obvious guy who runs around mocking women by pretending to be the most obnoxious woman on the planet, partnered with Bud Light in early 2023 to hype the brand on social media. The fallout was immediate, brutal and now we know it might be irreversible. 'Beer sales over the July 4th holiday weekend came in stronger than previously expected,' reports ZeroHedge. 'Anheuser-Busch InBev (ABI) also posted a solid performance during the period, though one brand under its adult beverage umbrella remained a clear laggard. Unsurprisingly, it was Bud Light, still struggling to recover for reasons that need little explanation.' Over the Fourth of July weekend, which delivered weather all over the country ideal for beer drinking, 'Anheuser-Busch InBev (ABI) led all manufacturers, with 52% of distributors reporting higher volumes vs last year [but] Bud Light remains a drag—74% reported lower volumes; marketing support remains weak.' Over this coming weekend, we can all celebrate the two year anniversary of Anheuser-Busch CEO Michel Doukeris claiming the fallout from the madness of hiring a dude in womanface who performs the equivalent of a female minstrel show was no big deal. The Bud Light volume decline in the U.S. over the first three weeks of April, as publicly reported, would represent around 1% of our overall global volumes for that period,' he said during an earnings call in July of 2023. 'This was the result of one can. It was not made for production or sale to the general public. It was one post, not a formal campaign or advertisement.' The Bud Light backlash reaffirmed my faith in America and Normal People. It really was the straw that broke Normal People's back. During the Biden administration, we were buried in gay propaganda, and when it's aimed at adults, who cares? But corporate America went insane, targeting children. Bud Light went insane legitimizing all this trans madness, which is either a perverted man publicly acting out a sexual fetish or someone suffering from a mental illness. Either way, normalizing this behavior crosses every decent person's line. Best of all, the Bud Light backlash told Normal People they were not alone in their justifiable disgust with this LGBTEWW nonsense, and corporate America, even large corporations like Target, were forced to listen. One of the tricks the dominant culture (news media, Hollywood, etc.) tries to pull off is to make Normal People feel outnumbered and isolated when we are actually the vast majority, the 80 in the 80/20. Anything, and I mean anything, that reminds Normal People they are not alone is kryptonite to the left, so Let's thank the dummies at Transheuser Busch for doing their part!" (Two Years Later, Transheuser Busch's Bud Light Sales Still Struggle by John Nolte). Look at the successors of the Weimar communists and see the formation of a new Axis Alliance comprised of Islamists and Marxists confronting their common enemy, free institutions. See this Axis dedicated to the destruction of Israel because it is a free, antisocialist, antiIslamic society. See the establishment of a Marxist, Islamic, People's Republic. See a campaign of genocide against Jews and Israel launched in the Middle East headquarters of the Axis Alliance, launched in Iran: "An antiIsrael activist whom NPR touted in recent years in a segment on 'how to be a good citizen'—citing her campaign work on behalf of Senator Ed Markey (D Mass)—filmed a proIran propaganda video from an Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps facility this week. Calla Walsh, a 20 year old socialist from Massachusetts, traveled to Tehran as part of a delegation hosted by World Service of the Islamic Republic of Iran Broadcasting, part of a propaganda junket to portray Iran as resilient in the aftermath of the US military bombings of Iran's nuclear facilities and IRGC outposts last month. Clad in a hijab, Walsh said it was 'the greatest honor of my life' to visit Iran, which she said was 'under genocidal siege' by the United States, and the 'Zionist entity.' "('It's the Greatest Honor Of My Life': Israel Hating American Woman Gushes Over Visit To Iran, Calls US 'Genocidal' After NPR Named Her 'A Good Citizen' by Chuck Ross). National Socialism. Look at the successors of Weimar's national socialists and see the promotion of Aryan race ideology. See the exaltation of Aryan genes coded for blond hair and blue eyes. See the promotion of Aryan eugenics, breeding, white supremacy and world revolution against liberal democracy: "US jeans brand American Eagle is facing accusations its new ad campaign featuring Sydney Sweeney is 'tone deaf' and promotes eugenics theory. The advertising campaign, which launched this week, features the blonde haired and blue eyed actor dressed in denim and it bears the tagline: 'Sydney Sweeney has great jeans.' The company saw a 10 per cent surge in sales after the advertisement's release. However, the campaign has faced mixed reviews online, with some social media users saying it alludes to theories of racial superiority. The advertising campaign features several videos in which the company uses 'genes' and 'jeans' in a play on words. Several videos show Sweeney, dressed head to toe in denim, discussing how great her genes/jeans are while playing with a puppy or starting up a Ford Mustang. 'Genes are passed down from parents to offspring, often determining traits like hair color, personality and even eye color,' she says in another video. 'My jeans are blue.' But some critics online say the ads allude to eugenics, a theory popular among white supremacists, that suggests the human race could be improved by breeding out 'less desirable traits.' " (Sydney Sweeney And American Eagle's Advertisement Controversy Explained by George Hewson). Marx's Children. A vulture is a bird of prey which eats dead animals. A group of these scavengers feeding on a carcass is called a wake. In the twenty first century, Marx's children have gathered and formed a wake. The vultures marked gender, race and class politics, and the vultures marked national socialist politics are feeding on the carcass of liberal civilization, which committed suicide by its rejection of reason.

AMERICA'S NATIONAL SOCIALIST LAW FRONT

In 1928, Hans Frank established the first organization for nazi lawyers, the BNSDJ, [Association of National Socialist Legal Professionals] and in 1930—at the age of thirty—he was elected to the Reichstag. Then, in 1933, after Hitler was appointed Chancellor, Frank's yeoman's work in reforming the legal system began in earnest. He was appointed the Bavarian Minister of Justice and Reich Commissioner. In this position, he established the German Legal Front (the Rechtsfront), which was the organized Bar of Germany, and the Academy of German Law, which was the organization charged with implementing Article 19 of the party platform by establishing a nazi legal system. Through these two organizations, Frank controlled the legal profession and the legal system. (Complicity In The Perversion Of Justice: The Role Of Lawyers In Eroding The Rule Of Law In The Third Reich by Cynthia Fontaine). Hitler's association. Hitler's academy. Hitler's law. Hitler's Bar. Hitler's Legal Front. From 1933 to 1945, the rule of law was hijacked in Germany to carry out the racist agenda of national socialism in a campaign of perversion of the legal profession without precedent in modern times. From 1933 to 1945, the law was not law in Germany; it was no system of rules grounded in justice and or morality; but was a weapon of racism established as official state policy and an official state religion, a weapon to blast away the legacies of the Enlightenment. The defeat of the Third Reich in 1945 marked only a temporary setback for the neoMarxist creed of race politics, and it would soon migrate to other nations and set up shop elsewhere in the West as civilization spiraled into collapse. In the 1960s, it found new homes. At this time, Marxism mutated into a monster with three gorgons, called Gender, Race and Class, and this monster went on rampage in homes, schools, offices and businesses, leaving no person or institution untouched. National socialism had unleashed a virus upon the world and this virus spread far and wide and could not be contained. In the twenty first century, this virus, this race Marxism, this gender, race and class monster, assumed control over the national association of lawyers in the former leader of the free world, and in a terrifying illustration of just how sick the West has become, transformed a venerable legal organization founded 150 years ago into a jackboot enforcing race and gender regimentation of law schools throughout the nation. In the twenty first century, the American Bar Association has become the American legal voice of the latest version of national socialism, and lowered the curtain on the American legal profession as the nation's guardian of liberal jurisprudence. Listen to its new mission and hear a manifesto of neoMarxist politics promoting radical feminism, black supremacy and rendering the liberal principle of "common right and common reason" championed by Edward Coke a dead letter. The manifesto of the new national socialist American Bar Association proclaims that a progressive legal association demands discrimination on the basis of race and sex in law school hiring and admissions. It demands selection on the basis of race and gende demographics. It demands proportional representation of women and blacks in law faculties and student bodies. It violates state laws, federal laws and the national Constitution prohibiting race and gender discrimination. It imposes race and gender diversity standards in place of merit standards and nondiscrimination standards. It only accredits Juris Doctor programs taught by blacks and women and and graduating blacks and women. It forces law schools to lower their admissions and hiring standards in order to establish student and facultyu diversity by including sufficient numbers of blacks and women. It only accredits racist and sexist law schools, and forces law schools to hire unqualified women and black professors on pain of deaccreditation. It sets up special race and gender selection boxes which law schools must check when hiring professors or admitting students. It replaces the liberal guarantee to treat individuals as individuals and not as members of groups, and to select students and professors on the basis of talent and ability and nothing else, with race and gender guarantees designed to advance the cause of Marxist women and Marxist black power. It places law schools under the iron heel of special committees, task forces, compliance officers, diversity trainings, recruitment strategies and classroom initiatives promoting the politics of women, blacks, minorities, gays, lesbians, bisexuals and transgenders, marching under the banners of diversity, equity and inclusion, and dedicated to the abolition of equal treatment, equal opportunity, merit based selection, equity as fairness to individuals, and Western liberal civilization: "Discrimination on the basis of race or sex in law school hiring and admissions is illegal, but the American Bar Association (ABA), the only federally approved accreditor of JD programs in the United States, has pushed law schools to discriminate anyway. This research in brief reports the results of a Pacific Legal Foundation survey conducted via public records requests of the 50 best public law schools (as ranked by US News & World Report). Forty five schools responded. The results indicate that law schools often face pressure from the ABA to adopt racial preferences in their admissions and hiring practices to meet the ABA's preferred demographics. Law schools generally cannot discriminate in these areas without violating the Constitution, Title VI of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, and state laws and constitutional provisions prohibiting race and sex discrimination. Furthermore, as a monopoly accreditor that can control access to federal student aid (FSA) programs and state licensure of attorneys, the ABA may be enough of a state actor that its requirements and pressures are especially invidious. Legislation is necessary to address the ABA's unlawful pressure on law schools. The ABA has vigorously enforced its diversity standards. It investigated George Mason University School of Law extensively starting in 2000 for supposed violations of its diversity standards and only gave up after the school quietly lowered its admissions standards to satisfy the ABA's demands. In 2006, the newly established Charleston School of Law failed to gain ABA accreditation over concern about insufficient racial diversity. The ABA accredited Charleston Law only after the school agreed to appoint a director of diversity. In 2006, professor David Barnhizer of the Cleveland-Marshall College of Law wrote about a similar instance: 'Not long ago, I was asked to be a candidate for dean at another law school. I asked the chair of the dean search committee to send me some background materials. The materials were sent and included the most recent ABA accreditation reports and follow ups relating to the law school. After reading the reports, I withdrew my name from their search. The reason I withdrew had nothing to do with the law school but with the ABA accreditation report and the degree to which the culture of soft repression had reached inside the accreditation mechanisms of those two institutions. Two main criticisms were voiced as serious concerns by the ABA report to the extent that immediate action was needed to avoid a negative final accreditation report. One criticism was that of twenty three faculty members, only eight were women. It was expected that something must be done immediately to fix this problem. Because the law school was eager to solidify its status with the ABA, it was particularly vulnerable to the pressure. The result was that it hired a woman only one year out of law school who would otherwise probably not have been hired at that point in her legal career.' Pacific Legal Foundation (PLF) researchers sent Freedom of Information Act requests to the 50 best public law schools, as ranked by US News & World Report, requesting copies of the most recent accreditation visit report from the ABA's peer review team. Forty five responded with copies of reports dated from 2014 to 2023. Some reports are structured to follow the ABA standards, whereas other reports take a more narrative approach. Some reports use checked boxes to signify compliance with various subsections, whereas others provide qualitative evaluations. PLF researchers evaluated accreditation teams' assessments of law school admissions and faculty hiring practices under standards 205 and 206 to understand how the accreditation process forces law schools to modify their hiring and admissions practices to satisfy the ABA's standards, even when doing so might violate state or federal civil rights guarantees. On the one hand, 20 law schools received accreditation reports indicating failure to meet the ABA's diversity standards. Common points of failure included not having enough minority faculty, not having enough women faculty, not having enough student diversity, failing to follow through with diversity plans, concerns about the treatment of minority faculty, having limited DEI curriculum integration, not having enough LGBTQ+ support groups, and attrition concerns for minority students. On the other hand, 25 law schools received accreditation reports acknowledging or praising the schools' compliance with the ABA's diversity standards. Common commendations included having a strong commitment to hiring diverse faculty, having diversity focused scholarships and fellowships, having pipeline programs for minority students, having active DEI committees and task forces, having diversity recruitment strategies, having inclusive classroom initiatives, having a presence of DEI leadership positions, and having faculty diversity training." (Unconstitutional Accreditation Pressures Force Law Schools To Discriminate Against Faculty And Students by Caitlin Styrysky and Alison Somin). In 1953, the United States Post Office issued a postage stamp commemorating the seventy fifth anniversary of the American Bar Association. The stamp carried the caption, 1876 Liberty Under Law 1953. Forcing law schools to establish race and sex discrimination in admissions and hiring in violation of the Constitution, the American Bar Association has banished schools to national socialist outer darkness where there is no liberty and no law.

BLACK FUHRER'S SWASTIKA

We erupted into a frenzy of nationalistic pride that bordered on hysteria. For minutes on end, we shouted at the top of our lungs, with tears streaming down our faces: Sieg Heil, Sieg Heil, Sieg Heil! From that moment on, I belonged to Adolf Hitler body and soul. (A Child Of Hitler: Germany In The Days When God Wore A Swastika by Alfons Heck). Mysticism. Tribalism. Racism. Nationalism. Socialism. Conspiracy theories. Delusions of persecution. From 1933 to 1945, Adolf Hitler embodied political evil as he burned down Germany and the world with the gasoline of religion and the rejection of reason. He was a student of Karl Marx and adopted Marx's method of viewing man and history through the prism of tribes. He adopted Marx's exaltation of the collective as a mystical superorganism existing above and apart from the individuals who comprise it. He adopted Marx's exaltation of socialism and rejection of the rights, freedom and dignity of the individual. But he changed the signs, flags and colors of the original. In place of Marx's religion of class, Germany's Fuhrer and Reichskanzler promoted a religion of race, and in place of Marx's doctrine of class hatred, class war, class revolution and class extermination, he promoted a doctrine of race hatred, race war, race revolution and race extermination. His neoMarxist religion of race transformed Germany into a totalitarian state, created an expansionist foreign policy which led to World War II, and launched the Holocaust which saw the extermination of six million Jews. On April 30, 1945, amidst the rising smoke and ashes of the Third Reich, Adolf Hitler committed suicide, but he did not die. He migrated to new shores and set up shop under new signs, new flags and new colors. In the 1960s, he reappeared in the form of black supremacist ideologies and would lead global riots targeting whites, capitalism and the legacies of the Enlightenment for total destruction. In the 1960s, Germany's neoMarxst apostle of Aryan socialism reappeared as a neoMarxist apostle of black socialism, replaced Hitler's war against Jews with a war against whites, while he retained Hitler's war against capitalism and the Enlightenment. In the twenty first century, the latest version of a black Hitler has appeared and galvanized the moral sewers of the West, which are rising ever higher and submerging civilization. His name is Ibram Xolani Kendi and he is an American professor of race Marxism, a hate monger on behalf of the African diaspora, a hero of the Western cultural, academic and political establishment, a recipient of a MacArthur Fellowship and a Guggenheim Fellowship, and is included in Time magazine's 100 Most Influential People of 2020. Mein Kampf. Listen to Professor Kendi's twenty first century edition of Mein Kampf and hear a virus unleashed by Hitler mutate into black national socialism. He proclaims that race is the primary reality and individual existence is secondary to racial existence. Individuals count for nothing and race counts for everything. History is not made by individuals but is a struggle between racial groups. It is fair, just and equitable that whites be discriminated against and blacks be granted preferential treatment. The notions of objective truth and race neutrality are Enlightenment fictions which ignore the mystical racial essence of reality. Everything is race and nothing is devoid of a racial foundation, and all laws are race laws, all rules are race rules, all procedures are race procedures, all processes are race processes, all regulations are race regulations, all guidelines are race guidelines, all institutions are race institutions, all communities are race communities and all nations are race nations. Discrimination against whites and in favor of blacks is good, just and antiracist, while discrimination against blacks and in favor of whites is evil, unjust and racist. Racism is not racism, A is not A, and racism against whites is not racism, and only racism against blacks is racism. A progressive antiracist academic center is a blacks only academic center. A progressive society rejects the Enlightenment ideas of human essentialism, universality and equal rights, and is a national socialist congregation worshiping at the altar of skin color, antiscience, affirmative action and black supremacy: "Ibram Kendi’s Center for Antiracist Research is racist–according to the founder’s own definition. The College Fix analyzed the remaining team at his Boston University center, which has shrunk since last year due to budgetary problems. 'A racist policy is any measure that produces or sustains racial inequity between racial groups,' according to Kendi. His own definition applies to his think tank. 'By policy, I mean written and unwritten laws, rules, procedures, processes, regulations, and guidelines that govern people' he wrote in How To Be An Antiracist. 'There is no such thing as a nonracist or race neutral policy,' Kendi wrote. 'Every policy in every institution in every community in every nation is producing or sustaining either racial inequity or equity between racial groups.' But according to The Fix analysis of his hiring, his center is racist against whites, Native Americans, and hispanics. 'If discrimination is creating equity, then it is antiracist,' he wrote in How To Be An Antiracist. 'If discrimination is creating inequity, then it is racist.' his advisory board is 66 percent black, even though black Americans are only 13 percent of the population. The Fix did not identify any Native Americans on the board, even though they are three percent of the population. Hispanic males are also largely shut out of the center, both on the advisory board and among his general staff. Among the 21 individuals on his advisory board and staff, The Fix identified only one person who appears to be a hispanic male. This works out to about five percent of his staff. By contrast, Hispanic males are about 10 percent of the US Population. A spokesman for Color Us United criticized Kendi's ideology. 'For someone whose profession is addressing racism in a very public manner, one would think that Dr Kendi would be more sensitive to the delicate balance of racial demographics on his own advisory board,' Mike Markham told The Fix via email. He stated further: 'What is his explanation for the underrepresentation of Hispanic persons or the cost of a statistical overrepresentation of Asian Americans? And, by his worldview, what is the cost to nonblack minorities for having two thirds of his advisory board made up of black Amercians when that demographic represents only an estimated 13.6% of the population? Or is the real truth that the antiracism movement's fascination with skin color and disregard for the essence and character of the individual accurately represents its nonsensical and flawed nature?' " (Kendi's 'Antiracist' Center Is Racist By His Own Standards by Mike Lamb). Mein Kampf. Listen to Professor Kendi proclaim that there is no such thing as physical objects or objective reality and all thought and perception are determined by race. There is no such thing as a universal human identity and all identity is race identity. Blacks alone possess human identity while whites are disconnected from humanity and are subhuman: "He's back. And this time he has a new Netflix documentary. Because of course he does. Ibram X. Kendi recently spoke at a special screening for his new Netflix doc Stamped From The Beginning, which is based on his 2016 book examining the history of antiblack racism. At the screening, Kendi received a round of applause after he called out white people. 'I don't think white people worldwide have really reckoned with how much their own personal identity is shaped by constructions of whiteness, and how much that construction of whiteness prevents white people from connecting with humanity,' Kendi said. 'It's whiteness that prevents that,' he later added." (Ibram X. Kendi Gets Applause For Race Remarks At Netflix Screening: 'Whiteness Prevents White People From Connecting To Humanity' by David Ng). Mein Kampf. Listen to Professor Kendi proclaim that a progressive university is an institute for advanced black racist studies. A progressive university rejects nonpartisan intellectual inquiry as a product of white, capitalist, Enlightenment thinking. A progressive university teaches students that capitalism is a regime of white racism and environmental devastation caused by modern technological civilization belching out greenhouse gases. A progressive university rejects scholarly research in favor of black and brown agitation and propaganda. A progressive university teaches students that mystical social justice is superior to natural individual justice because groups and not individuals are the primary realities. A progressive university rejects the pursuit of academic excellence in favor of courses of political indoctrination drumming into students the necessity of world socialist revolution led by the African diaspora, whose mission is to establish a black totalitarian dictatorship and exterminate whites: "Howard University announced today the appointment of Ibram X. Kendi, PhD, one of the world's leading historians and most widely read scholars, as the director of the newly established Howard University Institute for Advanced Study. Built on the highest standards of intellectual inquiry, the institute is dedicated to interdisciplinary study advancing research of importance to the global African diaspora, including inquiry into race, technology, racism, climate change, and disparities. Dr Kendi's appointment and this new institute are a continuation of the university's long history in study and scholarly research on the diasporic experience of black and brown people. Dr Ibram X. Kendi's exceptional scholarship and unwavering commitment to social justice align perfectly with Howard University's mission and values as we deepen our scholarship on the African Diaspora, said Anthony K. Wutoh, PhD, Howard University's provost and chief academic officer. We are confident that under his leadership, the new institute will become a beacon of excellence and a catalyst for transformative change." (Howard University Announces The Hiring of Dr Ibram X. Kendi As Director Of The Howard University Institute For Advanced Study by Cedric Mobley). Mein Kampf. In the twenty first century, the Third Reich has returned to business peddling a variant of Hitler's creed. The old house of German national socialism has been reconstructed, has a new fuhrer and carries a new sign. Peddling the creed of black perception, black truth, black theory, black law, black history and black education, the old German house carries the sign: Under new management.

THE EUROPEAN UNION IS WATCHING YOU

He is the leader of Oceania, a communist totalitarian state whose ruling party, Ingsoc, which stands for English Socialism, wields unchecked power. His slogan is everywhere and is an everpresent reminder to the people that no one is entitled to privacy. His people are subjected to round the clock surveillance to ensure their ideological purity and adherence to communism. His slogan is Big Brother Is Watching You, and he is a character and symbol in George Orwell's dystopian novel about a communist nightmare, called Nineteen Eighty Four. Big Brother, symbol of communist government power, communist rejection of civil liberties and communist mass surveillance, has leaped out of the pages of Orwell's classic and landed in Europe in the twenty first century. The Communist Bloc inspired Orwell to write his book and the Communist Bloc, thirty years after its dissolution, has reappeared in the form of the European Union, and carried on the communist regime of personal invasion without precedent in history. In the twenty first century, a supranational political and economic union occupying an area of over four million square kilometers, with a population of over 450 million or over five percent of the world's population, and a Gross Domestic Product of over eighteen trillion euros, an entity ostensibly dedicaed to the preservation of European liberal values, has voted to revive the policies of the former Communist Bloc and bring Orwell's Big Brother to life. In a terrifying illustration of just how sick the West has become in the twenty first century, the birthplace of freedom in modern times has voted to adopt the number one gutter religion of our time, collecting human debris marked hatred and discontent flowing through the streets, as its official voice and face, and submerge itself in the onrushing tides of mass populist thought control. In the twenty first century, the forces of civilizational collapse have overtaken the European Union and by the unanimous consent of the people have transformed it into a communist surveillance regime and ideological echo chamber. See a regime of communist thought police suppress the voices of dissent, controversy and liberal civilization: "For years, the European Union has been fighting to access your private messages. Brussels desperately wants the ability to read every single piece of digital communication sent by an EU citizen—that includes texts, emails, DMs on social media apps like X, TikTok, or Instagram, and even messages sent via end to end encrypted services like Telegram and WhatsApp. None of your private conversations would be private any longer. This idea was put forward in 2022, as part of the Child Sexual Abuse Regulation (CSAR). The aim of this measure, called Chat Control, was to sniff out illegal content—specifically child pornographic material—and forward it to the authorities. In theory, AI technology would be used to scan the contents of every message before it is encrypted—that is, before it is scrambled into unreadable code that only the recipient can decipher. This aspect of the legislation proved too controversial for many member states, and it was rejected in the European Parliament. Now, though, the EU wants to try again. Upon taking over the presidency of the EU council last month, Denmark has made Chat Control a priority. Leaked minutes from a meeting of the Law Enforcement Working Party of the EU Council reveal that mass surveillance is firmly back on the agenda, with states attempting to smooth over previous disagreements. As it stands, 15 out of 27 nations back the plans, with some countries, such as Spain, even pushing for an outright ban of end to end encrypted messaging services. The Netherlands and Austria are bound by parliamentary votes before being able to support mandatory scanning, and Luxembourg and Slovenia say they are 'not yet convinced.' Belgium, Poland and Estonia are cautious, too. Poland did propose a suggestion to only target unencrypted messages and those individuals who were already under suspicion, but this was rejected, meaning that any legislation that materialzes from this is likely to apply to everyone, everywhere. It cannot be overstated just how devastating this would be for privacy. The EU has tried to reassure people that the messages will still be encrypted—only after they've first been scanned. But this effectively makes encryption pointless. It is the equivalent of the post office opening and reading your mail before sending it. Even the European Council's own legal service thinks this is a disaster, noting that 'client side scanning is a violation of human rights and does not depend on the type of technology.' Reclaim the Net is right to call it 'the biggest peacetime surveillance experiment in [European] history.' The trouble is that this Orwellian mandate is being framed—as online censorship so often is—as a vital protection for children. It's difficult to argue against a piece of legislation that promises to stop paedophiles from spreading content online and among themselves. That age old idea that 'if you have nothing to hide, you have nothing to fear' has made far too many people complacent when it comes to government surveillance. But there is very little evidence that Chat Control will be an effective way to stop the spread of images depicting child sex abuse in the first place, and it is partially the product of lobbying. What it will undoubtedly do is target law abiding citizens. The EU's Digital Services Act (DSA) is a prime example of this. It was introduced in 2022 with the purpose of countering illegal content, as well as 'misinformation and disinformation,' but effectively gives Brussels the power to censor anything it deems problematic. Any platform that fails to police users strictly enough can receive massive fines or possibly be banned in the bloc altogether. As a result, social media sites are careful to apply overly sensitive filters to avoid penalties. The overwhelming majority of posts flagged and removed under the DSA aren't even against the law. The story is similar in the UK, which is currently in the process of implementing the Online Safety Act (2023). Like CSAR and the DSA, the Online Safety Act was lobbied for and introduced with the express purpose of protecting children—specifically, to stop minors from seeing potentially harmful or age restricted content, like pornography. Last month, however, a Labor MP admitted that the law is being used to monitor 'sentiments contrary to immigration' online. And, in the same way as the DSA, the Online Safety Act's harsh punishments (fines of up to £18 million or 10% of global revenue, whichever is higher) incentivize social media companies to enforce the rules as strictly as possible. That means age restricting a speech from a Conservative MP about the grooming gangs scandal, or blocking a video from a different Tory MP about proparent policies, because it featured a baby. Laws that aim to police illegal and harmful content almost never end there. In the first instance, Chat Control may well be used to go after child abuse material. But it will likely soon expand to target criticism of immigration, opposition to woke ideology, and challenges to EU hegemony. Even those who don't think of themselves as holding particularly controversial opinions should be concerned about this. What is considered the 'acceptable' dogma of the day changes so rapidly now that you can soon find yourself on the wrong side of mainstream orthodoxy, even when your opinions were held by the vast majority of people just a few years ago." (The EU's Plan To Kill Private Messaging by Lauren Smith). In the European Union in the twenty first century, appearance is diametrically opposed to reality. The European Union appears to have four capitals, Brussels, Frankfurt, Luxembourg and Strasbourg. It appears to have twenty four official languages, from English to Romanian to Maltese. It appears to have three official scripts, Latin, Greek and Cyrillic. In reality, the European Union has one capital, one language and one script. Outlawing the online expression of viewpoints opposed to the prevailing party line of gender, race and class ideologies, the European Union has relocated its capitals to former Communist Bloc Moscow and Beijing, and communicates in the language and script of communist world revolution.

BRITAIN'S COMMUNIST KING

He was the King of Kings who ruled Iran in the fourth and fifth centuries. A follower of the Zoroastrian priest Mazdak, he led a communist revolution in the nation and decreed the sharing of all wealth and property. His guiding light Mazdak claimed to be a prophet of the god Ahura Mazda, and advocated communism in the name of this main god of Zoroastrianism, this god of the sky. The King of Kings was Kavad I and he established the first communist nation in history. In 496, twelve years after his accession to power, the voices of freedom led by the nobility deposed him and imprisoned him in the Castle of Oblivion. Communists in Iran revered this shah and his successor sons as "immortal souls" and the founders of popular liberation in the ancient world. King Kavid I was immortal and in the twenty first century entered a new king. Eighteen hundred years after he died, in a land seven thousand kilometers away from Iran, King Kavid I has reappeared. Born Prince Charles of Edinburgh on November 14, 1948 in Buckingham Palace, Charles III became King of Britain and the Commonwealth Realms on September 8, 2022, and reincarnated the Persian founder of communism. Becoming king at the age of 76, Charles had been a peddler of far left ideas for his entire royal career, peddling communism in the name of organic farming, alternative medicine, opposition to genetically modified food and stopping climate change, and after his investiture as king, he donned the mantle of King Kavad I and began preaching communism from his 1200 year old throne. King Charles III, the sixty fourth monarch in an office whose first monarch was Alfred the Great in the ninth century, has weaponized his office in the service of the number one gutter religion of our time. Charles Philip Arthur George, who became heir apparent to the throne when his mother, Queen Elizabeth II, acceded to the throne in 1952, has continued his promotion of communism in his three years as king and disgraced the oldest hereditary monarchy in the world. This is the throne whose King John in 1215 enacted the Magna Carta, a royal charter of human rights which has blazed across the world for over one thousand years. On June 15, 1215, King John codified the ancient English constitution of freedom rooted in the Anglo-Saxons. He established as the supreme law of the land a document which inspired the formation of the United States Constitution. He gave to a group of rebel barons who demanded that he confirm the ancient English Charter of Liberty a grant which would live forever on page one of the annals of man's struggles against the tyranny of the state: "Magna Carta is the greatest constitutional document of all times—the foundation of the freedom of the individual against the arbitrary authority of the despot." (Alfred Denning, English barrister and judge). On September 8, 2022, this constitution of freedom which defines English national character and existence was annuled with the commencement of King Charles' reign. Listen to the twenty first century, royal edition of the Communist Manifesto and hear the moral rot of England appear in the highest office in the land, hear the rot move from the head on down, and hear the rot toll the death bell for the cause of freedom in the West. Listen to King Charles promote communism in the name of honoring nature. In the name of honoring the north, east, south, west and the mystical soul of Mother Earth. In the name of honoring indigenous cultures, leaders, elders, and savages chanting words of magic, and wearing face paint, headdresses and robes of blue feathers. In the name of herbalists, educators, philanthropists, climate campaigners, radical environmentalists, organic farmers, crafts people and tribes from the Amazon. In the name of the sacred smoke released in mystical native ceremonies. In the name of human seriousness and thoughtfulness. In the name of human compassion and benevolence. In the name of sustainable farming, urban planning, traditional architecture, stopping greenhouse gas emissions, protecting traditional arts and crafts skills, and building bridges between different faiths. In the name of a mystical world view proclaiming the oneness of all things. In the name of abolishing a consumer culture which reduces people to objects and sells the natural world to the highest bidder. In the name of achieving moral progress and innovation. In the name of preserving the future of the earth. In the name of abolishing modern farming which exploits the earth. In the name of achieving radical change and a people's revolution. In the name of rejecting rational, scientific, secular modernity. In the name of fostering mutual respect and understanding between cultures and religions. In the name of preserving world religious traditions. In the name of Islamic art, Gothic cathedrals and the Christian faith. In the name of mystical prayer and contemplation. In the name of serving others, sacrificing oneself for others, and immolating oneself on the altar of the state: "It wasn't exactly a run of the mill royal occasion. In the sunny gardens of the Highgrove estate, I stood in a circle with King Charles and an eclectic group who were attending his first Harmony Summit. We raised our arms in honor of nature as we stood around a fire, which was burning within a ring of flowers. Presiding over the fire ceremony, in which we rotated as we honored the north, south, east and west and then Mother Earth, was an indigenous leader--an Earth Elder--wearing a headdress and a dazzling robe of blue feathers. A conch shell was blown. Butterflies flew around the flowers. And, in a concession to modernity, as well as holding up feathers in a blessing for the King, the elder was reading his incantations from an iPhone. There were people reaching to the sky, wearing colorful face paint and elaborate necklaces, while I held my palms up self consciously, melting in my Marks & Spencer suit. The summit was a celebration of the King's philosophy of harmony with nature--an inaugural event that the King's Foundation hopes will become a regular gathering. It brought together representatives from indigenous peoples, including from tribes in the Amazon, along with environmentalists, climate campaigners, organic farmers, herbalists, educators, crafts people and philanthropists. For good measure, there was Dwight from the US version of The Office, or at least actor Rainn Wilson, a director of a climate change group. There were other visitors from Amazon too: a film crew from Amazon Prime, making a documentary for next year, who were poring over every moment as the sacred smoke coiled up over the apple trees in Gloucestershire. The King, in a light summer suit, spoke a few quiet words of welcome, wearing a circlet of feathers and a scarf that had been draped ceremonially around his shoulders. A humane, ruminative, humorous and quietly radical figure, he was at the center of what he hopes will become the first of many such gatherings. But it raised the question--and perhaps opened a window--into what the King believes. What is this thoughtful man really thinking about? Harmony is the King's philosophy--it means that we should be working with the grain of nature rather than against it. Or 'her,' as he describes nature in his book on the subject, published in 2010. It's about the interconnectedness of all life, infused with a strong sense of the spiritual, and the idea that the human and natural worlds can't be separated. It's the philosophy that stitches together his many different pursuits--on the environment, climate change, sustainable farming, urban planning, architecture, protecting traditional craft skills and building bridges between different faiths. According to a source close to the King, it's 'perhaps the single most important part of his eventual legacy,' bringing together different strands of his work that might seem separate into 'one philosophical world view about creating a better, more sustainable world for future generations.' The King's views, including on the environment, were 'once seen as an outlier, but now many elements have been accepted and adopted as conventional thought and mainstream practice, embraced around the world.' In his book, Harmony: A New Way Of Looking At Our World, the King describes his purpose as a 'call to revolution,' and writes that he recognizes the strength of the word. It's a broadside against a consumer culture, in which people and the natural world become commodities. He warns of the environmental threats to the future of the Earth. There's a call to protect traditional crafts and skills and also for a radical change in rejecting modern, unsustainable, exploitative forms of farming. If not avant garde, he's an avant gardener. If you go for a walk in Highgrove's gardens there are small hurdle fences, with wooden rods woven around posts. The King makes these himself and this idea of things being inextricably woven together seems to be central to harmony. His book moves from the importance of geometry, with patterns rooted in nature, to the designs in Islamic art and the inspiring dimensions of Gothic cathedrals. A sense of the sacred in nature, as well as in people, seems to be an important part of this world view. At lunch at the Harmony Summit, grace was said by the Bishop of Norwich, Graham Usher. The King's idea of harmony dovetailed with a very deep personal Christian faith, he said. 'My sense is that he draws much of his energy and ideas from spending time in prayer and contemplation,' said the bishop. He said the King sees his role as serving others and a sense of this 'is seen in how he is always keen to learn from other religious traditions, building bridges and fostering good relationships built on respect and understanding.' " (Inside King Charles's Fiery Gathering That Shone A Light On His Beliefs by Sean Coughlan). November 15, 2015 was the eight hundredth anniversary of the Magna Carta. Listed by UNESCO on its Memory of the World register, the four extant copies of the original were on display at the British Library. In the twenty first century, the Magna Carta and its world of freedom are no longer in force. The copies preserved are dead letters. King Charles has fed them into a shredder marked communism, slavery and harmony in nature.

CLIMATE ANTISCIENCE ATTACKS CIVILIZATION

August 1945. Blinding, noiseless flashes incinerate Hiroshima and Nagasaki and bring forth the dawn of the Atomic Age. A group of Soviet sympathizing scientists led by Albert Einstein found an organization dedicated to preventing the use of nuclear weapons against the Communist Bloc. They call their front organization the Bulletin of the Atomic Scientists and in 1947, they found a journal with the same name. Since its debut, the cover of the journal has featured a Doomsday Clock to promote its far left political agenda. According to the journal, the clock is a prediction of threats to humanity arising from scientific and technological progress. The Clock's original setting in 1947 was at seven minutes to midnight, and in 2025, it has been set forward to 89 seconds, its closest ever setting. The journal proclaims that this closest setting is due to human induced climate change, and the setting can only be pushed back by the dismantling of modern scientific and technological civilization. The journal proclaims that the costs of human created greenhouse gas emissions far outweigh the benefits to mankind produced by modern scientific and technological civilization, and in consequence, the latter must be abolished and the clock of human history must be sent racing backward to the year zero. The journal proclaims that the costs of human progress far outweigh the benefits, and human progress must in consequence be rolled back. Science does not support this cost-benefit analysis, and exposes it as the peddling of irrational climate fear, climate anxiety, climate hysteria and climate doomsday.

Anticivilization. Unsupported by science, the environmentalists have declared war on modern life, modern industry and the modern energy powerhouses which support scientific and technological civilization. They have declared war on human living and human flourishing. They proclaim that scientific and technological civilization poses an existential threat to mankind. They proclaim that because human induced climate change is real and deserves attention, scientific and technological civilization must be abolished. They proclaim that the rational control of nature though the application of science has been catastrophic for the earth's climate, belching out agents of global incineration, and must be replaced by mystical communion with the land and sky. They proclaim that the solution to the problem of deleterious climate change is to deprive people of the energy necessary to sustain scientific and technological civilization. They proclaim that the solution to the problem of deleterious climate change is to deprive people of the reliable, affordable energy necessary to protect the characteristics defining human existence. They proclaim that the solution to the problem of deleterious climate change is to endanger human happiness and well being. They proclaim that the use of clean, nongreenhouse gas emitting energy on a mass basis will consign mankind to poverty, regression and savagery, but this is the price which must be paid for the sake of the survival of the planet: "Over my lifetime, I've had the privilege of working as an energy entrepreneur across a range of fields—nuclear, geothermal, natural gas, and more—and I now serve as Secretary of Energy under President Donald Trump. But above all, I'm a physical scientist who sees modern energy as nothing short of miraculous. It powers every aspect of modern life, drives every industry, and has made America an energy powerhouse with the ability to fuel global progress. The rise of human flourishing over the past two centuries is a story worth celebrating. Yet we are told—relentlessly—that the very energy systems that enabled this progress now pose an existential threat. Hydrocarbon based fuels, the argument goes, must be rapidly abandoned or else we risk planetary ruin. That view demands scrutiny. That's why I commissioned this report: to encourage a more thoughtful and science based conversation about climate change and energy. With my technical background, I've reviewed reports from the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, the US government's assessments, and the academic literature. I've also engaged with many climate scientists, including the authors of this report. What I've found is that media coverage often distorts the science. Many people walk away with a view of climate change that is exaggerated or incomplete. To provide clarity and balance, I asked a diverse team of independent experts to critically review the current state of climate science, with a focus on how it relates to the United States. I didn't select these authors because we always agree—far from it. In fact, they may not always agree with each other. But I chose them for their rigor, honesty, and willingness to elevate the debate. I exerted no control over their conclusions. What you'll read are their words, drawn from the best available data and scientific assessments. I've reviewed the report carefully, and I believe it faithfully represents the state of climate science today. Still, many readers may be surprised by its conclusions—which differ in important ways from the mainstream narrative. That's a sign of how far the public conversation has drifted from the science itself. To correct course, we need open, respectful, and informed debate. That's why I'm inviting public comment on this report. Honest scrutiny and scientific transparency should be at the heart of our policymaking. Climate change is real, and it deserves attention. But it is not the greatest threat facing humanity. That distinction belongs to global energy poverty. As someone who values data, I know that improving the human condition depends on expanding access to reliable, affordable energy. Climate change is a challenge—not a catastrophe. But misguided policies based on fear rather than facts could truly endanger human well being. We stand at the threshold of a new era of energy leadership. If we empower innovation rather than restrain it, America can lead the world in providing cleaner, more abundant energy—lifting billions out of poverty, strengthening our economy, and improving our environment along the way." (A Critical Review of Impacts of Greenhouse Gas Emissions on the US Climate, Report to US Energy Secretary Christopher Wright, July 23, 2025 by John Christy, Judith Curry, Steven Koonin, Ross McKitrick and Roy Spencer. Foreword by Christopher Wright). Anticivilization. Unsupported by science, environmentalists proclaim that the economic costs of human induced global warming are stratospheric and necessitate the destruction of scientific and technological civilization. They proclaim that human induced global warming must be stopped and abated by stopping scientific and technological civilization. They proclaim that scientific and technological civilization must be destroyed because human induced global warming harms growth in poor countries. They proclaim that the social cost of carbon is stratospheric and necessitates the destruction of scientific and technological civilization. They proclaim that the preservation of the planet necessitates severe climate action culminating in the destruction of scientific and technological civilization. They proclaim that the global climate system has been destroyed by human induced global warming created by scientific and technological civilization. They proclaim that human created CO2 pollution is poses extreme risks and dangers to mankind and the earth and necessitate the destruction of scientific and technological civilization. They proclaim that the only rational climate model is one which predicts global disaster at the hands of scientific and technological civilization, and the only rational climate policy is one which demands its destruction in order to stop human inducted global warming: "Economists have long considered climate a relatively unimportant factor in economic growth, a view echoed by the IPCC [Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Control] itself in Assessment Review 5. Mainstream climate economics has recognized that CO2 induced warming might have some negative economic effects, but they are too small to justify aggressive abatement policy and that trying to stop or cap global warming even at levels well above the Paris target would be worse than doing nothing. An influential study in 2012 suggested that global warming would harm growth in poor countries, but the finding has subsequently been found not to be robust. Studies that take full account of modeling uncertainties either find no evidence of a negative effect on global growth from CO2 emissions or find poor countries as likely to benefit as rich countries. Social Cost of Carbon (SCC) estimates are highly uncertain due to unknowns in future economic growth, socioeconomic pathways, discount rates, climate damages, and system responses." (A Critical Review of Impacts of Greenhouse Gas Emissions on the US Climate, Report to US Energy Secretary Christopher Wright, July 23, 2025 by John Christy, Judith Curry, Steven Koonin, Ross McKitrick and Roy Spencer). Anticivilization. Since the dawn of the twentieth century, a clock has been ticking and its tickings are growing louder. They are the tickings of civilizational collapse. Listen to them. Marxism and its race and gender offshoots. Marxism and its national socialist offshoots. Marxist critical theory criticizing universal truth, morality, science and the Enlightenment. Marxism joining forces with Islam to destroy the liberal West. The crescendo is incessant, unstoppable and earsplitting. In the twenty first century, the clock has struck midnight. The final tick is Marxist environmentalism. Its tick is a bomb which has exploded across the world. The columns of subversion and mushroom clouds of madness have destroyed scientific and technological civilization in the name of combating human induced global warming. One hundred years after the masses unleashed the Marxist devil upon free institutions, its radical environmentalist have brought down the end of the world.

RADICAL AMERICA HATES DONALD TRUMP

Metastasis is a disease agent's spread from an initial site to a secondary site within an organism. It is a cancer invasion, the extension and penetration of cancer cells to other areas, and it betokens imminent death. Cancer which is not localized and has spread is cancer which is rapidly killing the host. In the twentieth century, in the world's arsenal of freedom and beacon of light for the oppressed, a cancer struck and has been spreading ever since. This was a cancer sweeping through the West, and its invasion of this nation was a tragedy of historic proportions and a signpost pointing into general civilizational collapse. In the twentieth century, the cancer of communism, the number gutter religion of our time, struck the United States of America and would render its free traditions and institutions a dead letter. In the twentieth century, the voters of America decided to repeal their Constitution, a constitution of human liberty and a child of the Enlightenment, because they had grown weary and fearful of individual existence and sought to submerge themselves in the oceanic waters of the collective. Rejecting reason and sanity, they embraced religion, embraced a religion replacing the old Christian God in Heaven with a new God on earth called Society as the collector of human sacrifices, and through its apostle Karl Marx, demanded universal human enslavement. In the twentieth century, the voters of America gave their nation the cancer of communism, and parading under a thousand different names, from Trust Busting to the National Interest to the New Deal to Social Security to the Great Society to the Affordable Care Act, it has metasticized in the twenty first century and produced ugly outgrowths and excresences, rendering America discolored, disfigured and unrecognizable. The spread of any cancer from its original site is inevitable, and any attempt to save the organism must involve the destruction of the root cause. In the 2016 and 2024 presidential elections, there were sufficient voices of freedom in America, not the majority for the majority was cancerous, to elect a president whose platform was to remove the secondary tumors afflicting the nation. The removal of the original cancer was not possible because communism has been in the nation's DNA for over a century. Irradiated by the ionizing power of national moral breakdown leading to the yearning for collective existence, the American DNA has been damaged and is producing violent cancer cells. In the 2016 and 2024 presidential elections, sufficient numbers of voters opposed to the secondary tumors spreading throughout the nation elected Donald Trump with a mandate to remove them. In the 2016 election, Trump received 46 percent of the popular vote, and in the 2024 election, he received 49 percent, no majorities but votes which were sufficiently spread out to give him victories in the Electoral College. Target Trump. The secondary tumors of the communist cancer Trump has removed include the elimination of the penalty for not obtaining health insurance established by Barack Obama under the Affordable Care Act, and the elimination of the penalty for not buying electric cars, established by Joe Biden under the Inflation Reduction Act, by the elimination of the 7500 dollar tax credit for electric car purchases. Obeying the mandate given to him by sufficient numbers of voters, Donald Trump is the mandate liberation president, and for this, and for his efforts to remove other secondary tumors, marked racist and sexist diversity policies, insane transgender rights policies, antifree speech codes, Marxist control over academia, the enforcement of gender, race and class politics, out of control welfare spending and illegal immigration of enemy aliens, he has incurred the hatred of voters comprising over one half of the total, and made them target him for total destruction. The Marxist half of America hates Donald Trump because he seeks to end Green New Deal social engineering and has advanced the cause of human liberty by allowing people to buy the cars of their choice: "We will end the Green New Deal, and we will revoke the electric vehicle mandate, saving our auto industry and keeping my sacred pledge to our great American autoworkers. You'll be able to buy the car of your choice." Target

Trump. The Marxist half of America hates Donald Trump because he has reduced the tax burden on tipped workers, overtime workers and retirees. Because he has sealed the nation's southern border and commenced mass deportation operations against the migrant scum of the earth. Because he has ended Joe Biden's catch and release policy toward illegal aliens. Because he has brought the entrance of illegal aliens into the nation down to zero. Because he opposes transgender ideology which proclaims that human sex chromosomes play no role in the determination of sex and human sex can be changed at will. Because he has banned biological men calling themselves women from competing in women's sports. Because he has banned the chemical and surgical mutilation of children perpetrated to accomplish the impossible and change their sex. Because he has affirmed the primacy of science and sanity against the transgenderist assault on reality: "President Donald Trump has racked up myriad wins thus far in his administration, with Thursday marking the 200th day since he was once again sworn in as president of the United States. 1. The One Big Beautiful Bill Act. The One Big Beautiful Bill Act, which Trump signed into law on July 4, is his legacy legislation, delivering on a range of campaign promises from tax cuts to the border. The bill grants significant tax deductions for tipped and overtime workers as well as seniors, delivers sweeping tax cuts for Americans, and allows for tax deductions on auto loans for American made cars. The bill also directs the completion of Trump's US southern border wall and funds a mass deportation operation that will enable as many as a million deportations annually. 'It's the most popular bill ever signed in the history of our country. Whether you're military or anybody else, this is the most single most popular bill ever signed, and it includes the largest tax cut in American history, the largest spending cut, $1.7 trillion, and yet you won't even notice it,' Trump said at the signing. 3. Zero Illegal Aliens Admitted into the United States since April. At the heart of Trump's campaign in both 2016 and 2020, along with the economy and trade, was his commitment to stop unfettered illegal immigration at the United States' southern border. Trump made dramatic progress on this front in his first term before former President Joe Biden assumed office in 2021 and reversed key Trump policies, including Trump's end of catch of release. Trump has taken sweeping action through executive action since day one, as well as through the One Big Beautiful Bill Act, to fulfill his promise of putting an end to the massive surge of illegal immigraton under Biden. The effectiveness of his policies is evident. As Breitbart News Texas's Bob Price and Randy Clark first reported in a major exclusive last Friday, July marked the third consecutive month that border patrol released zero migrants who illegally entered the United States. 'We're very tough on the border, and people can come into our country, but they have to come in legally,' the president clarified. 6. Protecting Women and Children from the Effects of Trans Ideology. Another major win that Trump has delivered for Americans is protecting women and children from trans ideology. For one, Trump signed an executive order in February banning men from competing in women's sports, which was becoming normalized under the Biden administration. Surrounded by young girls and female athletes, Trump signed the order in the East Room of the White House. 'From now on, women's sports will be only for women,' he said during the event. In January, Trump also signed an executive order banning sex change surgeries for minors. 'Today, it was my great honor to sign an Executive Order banning the chemical castration and medical mutilation of innocent children in the United States of America,' Trump wrote in a Truth Social post at the time. 'Our Nation will no longer fund, sponsor, promote, assist, or support socalled gender affirming care, which has already ruined far too many precious lives,' the 45th and 47th president continued." (Donald Trump's Six Biggest Wins At 200 Days In Office by Nick Gilbertson).
Target Trump. The Marxist half of America hates Donald Trump because he opposes the Marxist rejection of objective facts in favor of ideological legends and constructs. Because he opposes Marxist historical revisionism. Because he opposes the Marxist assault on individual rights and human flourishing free from shackles of the state. Because he opposes the Marxist condemnation of capitalism as racist, sexist, oppressive and exploitative. Because he opposes Marxist indoctrination in the religions of gender, race and class. Because he opposes Marxist divisions, wars and destruction of liberal civilization. Because he defends America's Enlightenment heritage of reason, science, constitutional government and pursuit of a perfect union under the rule of law. Because he seeks to restore federal cultural sites to serve once again as inspirations to the people to defend the traditional American cause of freedom, and seeks to make the nations parks, musuems and monuments blaze once again with the fires of the American Revolution: "Over the past decade, Americans have witnessed a concerted and widespread effort to rewrite our Nation's history, replacing objective facts with a distorted narrative driven by ideology rather than truth. This revisionist movement seeks to undermine the remarkable achievements of the United States by casting its founding principles and historical milestones in a negative light. Under this historical revision, our Nation's unparalleled legacy of advancing liberty, individual rights, and human happiness is reconstructed as inherently racist, sexist, oppressive, or otherwise irredeemably flawed. Rather than fostering unity and a deeper understanding of our shared past, the widespread effort to rewrite history deepens societal divides and fosters a sense of national shame, disregarding the progress America has made and the ideals that continue to inspire millions around the globe. It is the policy of my Administration to restore Federal sites dedicated to history, including parks and museums, to solemn and uplifting public monuments that remind Americans of our extraordinary heritage, consistent progress toward becoming a more perfect Union, and unmatched record of advancing liberty, prosperity, and human flourishing. Museums in our Nation's capital should be places where individuals go to learn—not to be subjected to ideological indoctrination or divisive narratives that distort our shared history." (Restoring Truth And Sanity To American History, Executive Order by Donald Trump, March 27, 2025). Target Trump. The timeline of cancer has been the timeline of America since the dawn of the twentieth century. Powerful ionizing radiation, able to remove electrons from atoms, invades a healthy body. The radiation causes DNA strands to break apart, producing uncontrollable cell growth. The new cancer cells proliferate and produce tumors. The tumors begin to overtake the healthy cells and to spread darkness across the body. Challenging the Marxist half of the nation, challenging its opposition to the liberal Western foundations of American society, Donald Trump has removed the the metastatic tumors of gender, race and class politics. He has not removed the original cancer, which will spread again, but has given the nation a few more seconds to live before it dies.

GERMANY'S SCHOOLS OF SUBVERSION

A haunted house in ghostlore is a house inhabited by disembodied spirits of the dead who were former residents. Signs of haunting include creaking sounds, rattling sounds and knocking sounds. The Roman author Pliny the Younger tells a ghost story in his letters, describing an old man with a long beard and rattling chains, haunting his house in Athens. In the twenty first century, Germany is a haunted house creaking, rattling and knocking with the ghosts of two totalitarian regimes. Terrorizing the people with the iron heel of Marxism, they are still in the land and visit every home, school, office and business. They represent two strands of Marxism, an original class war strand and a later Hitler invented race war strand, and as manifestations of the German DNA of collectivism and enslavement, they are ineradicable features of German society. The fascist Third Reich regime and the communist East German regime have fallen but are not dead, and are present in Germany round the clock. Their influence on the nation is a mirror of the general influence of Marxism on the West today, an influence which is synonomous with the Western cultural and political establishment. The communists and fascists in control of Germany and the West today have assumed control over Germany's schools and rendered the liberal ideas embodied in the 1948 Basic Law of the Federal Republic a dead letter. They seek to return Germany to its illiberal roots as they mirror the general state of civilizational collapse. They have issued a manifesto of subversion of Germany's postwar liberal school system, lasting a half a century from 1948 to the twenty first century, and to read it is to hear a nation, a society, a culture and a set of ideas, the ideas of the Enlightenment, descend into a state of free fall. Germany's present day communist and fascist manifesto of education proclaims that a progressive school system is a course in ideological indoctrination, teaching students what to think and not how to think. It teaches students the latest party line and the importance of ideological lockstep in place of reading, writing and mathematics. It exalts students from antiliberal migrant backgrounds, teaching them that their backgrounds are superior to Western liberal culture. It placards on every wall proclaiming School Without Racism which is a code phrase for School Opposed To Freedom and Capitalism. It holds regular project days on which collaboration for Marxist revolution is discussed and planned. It proclaims that schools which teach liberal values and perspectives are hotspots of racial discrimination. It plans, designs and builds communist robots. It promotes the antiliberal ideas of nonWestern cultures in the name of cultural empowerment. It teaches students that truth and morality are relative to culture and there are no objective, universal ideas of freedom, justice, law or human rights. It condemns the traditional liberal curriculum as old fashioned, harmful and discriminatory toward migrants. It condemns the traditional goal of promoting assimilation to liberal values as racist and imperialist. It condemns liberal ideas as oppressive because noninclusive of tribalist ideas. It teaches students that human induced global warming is catastrophic and can only be stopped by the destruction of scientific and technological civilization. It teaches students that scientific and technological civilization has blanketed the earth with raging floods and forest fires and must be destroyed. It indoctrinates students with antiindustry and antitechnology propaganda, seeking to induce panic and fear over greenhous gas emissions, in the name of climate education. It rejects empirical facts in favor of Marxist narratives. It teaches Marxist ideologies in grammar lessons, teaching students through sentence structure practice that Brexit was bad, that the Marxist policies of the European Union are good, that diversity mandates requiring racist and sexist selection are good, that transgenderism, which denies the existence of sex chromosomes and the biological reality of human sex determination, is true, and that the mass settlement of unvetted, antiliberal, refugee scum is good. It rejects rational values and norms and promotes Marxist feelings and sensitivities. It condemns parents opposed to the recruitment of their children to fight Marxist culture wars as troublemakers and threats to sound education. It threatens parents opposed to the Marxist ideological capture of the classroom with the persecution of their children, including failing and expelling them. It rejects the free and open discussion of ideas and opinions in favor of Marxist political messaging. It rejects the teaching of Western literary classics and foreign languages in favor of the party literature and language of Marxism. It promotes Marxist planning and regulation of people's lives. It rejects scientific inquiry and critical thinking in favor of Marxist political conformity. It rejects objective facts in favor of Marxist ideological constructs. It rejects intellectual rigor in favor of blind acceptance of Marxist tenets. It imposes a Marxist outlook on students with the goal of forming an army of revolutionaries and ensuring that the future belongs to the enemies of liberal civilization: "Germany’s school system is in crisis, not only due to declining standards, but also because education is being systematically transformed into ideological indoctrination. Many parents sense this troubling shift, and while open protest remains rare, discontent with the education system is growing. The numbers tell the story. In the 1980s and 1990s, private schools were considered inferior options for students who were struggling. Today, however, they offer a welcome alternative to an increasingly corrupt system. Around 12 percent of schools in Germany are now private, despite substantial fees, and there are long waiting lists. Parents are increasingly abandoning a public system they no longer trust. This exodus from state education coincides with alarming drops in performance. One third of German pupils now fail to meet the minimum requirements for basic skills such as reading and mathematics—a 'worrying development' that has prompted education officials to raise concerns. Yet, confidence in politicians’ ability to address these problems has reached an all time low, as surveys show—and with good reason. The root causes extend beyond the obvious challenge of language barriers. According to 2024 studies, over 40 percent of pupils now have migrant backgrounds. While mass migration has undoubtedly put pressure on the system, acknowledging this uncomfortable truth would force policymakers to confront the consequences of their own decisions. More insidious still is the fact that schools have become battlegrounds for cultural engineering. The 2015 refugee crisis accelerated a shift away from traditional education towards ‘cultural empowerment’ and relativistic thinking. A 2015 study, supported by the Commissioner for Migration, criticized textbooks for assuming 'the German perspective as the norm,' asking, 'How can textbooks promote inclusive language?' The idea of an assimilationist model of education, based on the notion that all students, including those from migrant backgrounds, can benefit from a liberal, topic oriented curriculum, was dismissed as outdated and harmful. Even worse, German children are now taught to view their own culture with suspicion while embracing fashionable causes without question. The result of this moral confusion is evident everywhere: almost all German schools display School Without Racism placards. To earn this label, 70 percent of members of the school community must pledge to combat ‘all forms of discrimination’ and hold regular ‘project days’ on approved topics. The implicit message is that schools without such explicit antiracist awareness are on the verge of becoming hotspots of discrimination. It seems that it is no longer enough for schools to simply not be racist—they must resort to cheap, top down antiracist symbolism. As educational standards collapse, virtue signaling flourishes. Perhaps nowhere is ideological corruption more evident than in climate education. A recent investigation by Die Welt revealed that textbooks often manipulate scientific facts to support a particular narrative. According to science journalist Axel Bojanowski, the main aim is to instil fear of global warming in children and young people. Some schools use a WDR public broadcaster developed Augmented Reality app, which allows pupils to experience burning forests and flood disasters in the classroom 'almost as if they were right in the middle of it.' Textbook illustrations are routinely distorted to show catastrophic scenarios. Seydlitz Georgraphie 2, a geography textbook for secondary schools published by Westermann, is only one of many examples. It includes a temperature graph that supposedly shows average global temperatures over 12,000 years, with today’s temperature standing out by 0.4 degrees—despite uncertainty over whether current temperatures exceed those of 6,000 years ago. This fear mongering isn’t intended to teach science but rather to create compliant believers. Worryingly, many other modern textbooks also reveal the extent to which education has been transformed into ideology. Cornelsen’s Focus On Success (2023 edition) for secondary school students learning English is a particularly egregious example of this. It even incorporates ideology into grammar exercises." (German Education: From Learning To Indoctrination by Sabine Beppler Spahl). The Borley Rectory in Borley, England was a house built in 1862 to house the rector of the parish of Borley. From the time of its construction to its demolition 1944, it was described as "the most haunted house in the world." People saw ghosts of nuns at twilight and phantom coaches driven by headless horsemen. In the twenty first century, Germany is a nation haunted by totalitarian ghosts from its infamous past. They are joined by the Marxist gender, race and class horsemen of the apocalypse. Proclaiming that politics and ideology take precedence over facts and science, that ideological conformity takes precedence over evidence based thinking, and that progressive education is a course in communist and fascist indoctrination, German schools have shut down the mind.

REDS BURN EUROPE'S FLAG OF FREEDOM

Its location is the Northern Hemisphere. Bordered by the Arctic Ocean, the Atlantic Ocean, the Mediterranean Sea and Asia, it occupies ten million square kilometers or two percent of the earth's surface. It is called Europe and it is the birthplace of freedom in modern times. Its leading lights are the world's voices of human flourishing. Look at them. Look at John Milton, John Locke, Richard Overton, William Henry, Algernon Sidney, Thomas Jefferson, Adam Smith and Lafayette. "Freedom speech is the liberty to know, to utter, and to argue freely according to conscience, and is above all other liberties," proclaims John Milton in Areopagitica. "To every individual in nature is given an individual property by nature, not to be invaded or usurped by any other. No man has power over my rights and liberties, and I over no man's," proclaims Richard Overton. There is a natural right to liberty of conscience which must be protected from government invasion, proclaims John Locke. "Free men always have the right to resist tyrannical government," proclaims Algernon Sidney. "All men are created equal and endowed by their creator with certain unalienable rights, among these life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness," proclaims Thomas Jefferson in the Declaration of Independence. These defenders of liberal order were blazing jewels in the crown of Europe and beacons of light for the oppressed down through the generations. In the twenty first century, after one thousand years of Western history which saw revolutions and world wars fought in defense of freedom, and quill pens dipped in the ink of freedom composing the Magna Carta, Two Treatises On Government and the Declaration Of The Rights Of Man And Of The Citizen, Europe has been conquered by the enemy. The enemy is the number one gutter religion of our time, given power and influence by the masses who have turned their backs on Europe's springtime of freedom symbolized by the Age of Enlightenment. The enemy is a channel and sewer flowing with human debris, the debris marked envy, hatred, rage and discontent, which have submerged free institutions. The enemy is a totalitarian movement declaring war on European freedom and promoting gender, race and class ideologies. The enemy is called Marxism, and its accession to absolute power in the twenty first century signals the suicide of Europe through the treason of the majority. In the twenty first century, the map of Europe has been redrawn by the Marxist cultural and political establishment and transformed into a slave empire which has stamped out freedom of speech. In nation after nation, Marxist majorities have rendered liberal charters and constitutions null and void, and have hijacked the European Union and flown it into Soviet style camps patrolled by the tanks of political correctness. Look at Europe today and see the betrayal by the majority of the liberal values which set the West apart from the nonWestern world and made it the envy of those trapped in darkness and night, who never saw or heard such a thing as free speech in their lives. Look at Europe today and see a continent reduced to a shadow of its former self and rendered morally and spiritually unrecognizable. Britain. Look at Britain today and see restrictions on antiMarxist speech. See criminal and civil laws bludgeon antiMarxist speech. See Marxist and Muslim antisemitic speech protected in the name of free speech. See antiMarxist and antiMuslim speech banned as hateful and offensive. See antiMarxist speech banned by Public Spaces Protections Orders. See antiMarxist speech banned in Safe Access Zones. Significant human rights issues included credible reports of serious restrictions on freedom of expression, including enforcement of or threat of criminal or civil laws in order to limit expression; and crimes, violence or threats of violence motivated by antisemitism. The law generally provided for freedom of speech, including for members of the press and other media, and the government generally respected this right, though there were specific areas of concern, including involving restrictions on political speech deemed 'hateful' or 'offensive' as well as speech within Public Spaces Protections Orders areas (allowing local councils to limit speech rights within designated areas) and Safe Access Zones (limiting speech rights around abortion clinics). These restrictions on freedom of speech could include prohibitions on efforts to influence others when inside a restricted area, even through prayer or silent protests. The law prohibited expressions of hatred toward persons because of their color, race, nationality (including citizenship), ethnic or national origin, religion, or sexual orientation as well as any communication that was deemed threatening or abusive and was intended to harass, alarm, or distress a person. The penalties for such speech included fines, imprisonment, or both. There were laws in the United Kingdom (UK) that restricted freedom of speech in certain areas or allowed local councils to establish areas with restrictions on freedom of speech. The law authorized UK authorities, including the Office of Communications (Ofcom), to monitor all forms of communication for speech they deemed illegal. The Online Safety Act of 2023, which came into force in 2024, defined the category of 'online harm' and expressly expanded Ofcom's authority to include American media and technology firms with a substantial number of British users, regardless of whether they had a corporate presence in the UK. Under the law, companies were required to engage in proactive 'illegal content risk assessment' to mitigate the risk of users encountering speech deemed illegal by Ofcom. Experts warned that one effect of the bill could be government regulation to reduce or eliminate effective encryption (and therefore user privacy) on platforms." (2024 Country Reports On Human Rights Practices: United Kingdom, United States State Department). Germany. Look at Germany today and see Marxist restrictions on freedom of expression. See Marxist and Muslim violence and threats of violence against Jews protected in the name of freedom of expression. See antiMarxist speech banned as extremist. See the government arrest, try, convict and jail people for inciting antiMarxist race hated but not for inciting proMarxist race hate, and for promoting national socialism but not for promoting communism, and for denying Hitler's holocaust but not for denying communist holocausts. See antiMarxist online speech proclaimed to be illegal content. See antiMarxist online speech proclaimed to be an online hate crime. See online criticisms of Marxist feminism and the Marxist front International Women's Day banned as "misogyny on the internet." See online criticisms of Marxist feminism banned as forms of rape, murder, vandalism, sexual violence and defamation against women: "The human rights situation in Germany worsened during the year. Significant human rights issues included restrictions on freedom of expression and credible reports of crimes, violence, or threats of violence motivated by antisemitism. The constitution provided for freedom of speech, including for members of the press and other media, and the government generally respected this right. An independent media, an effective judiciary, and a functioning democratic political system generally combined to promote freedom of speech, including for media members. Nonetheless, in accordance with national law, the government imposed limits on the speech of groups it deemed extremist. The government arrested, tried, convicted, and imprisoned several individuals for speech that authorities deemed incited racial hatred, endorsed nazism, or denied the Holocaust. The law required social networks not only to assess and potentially restrict illegal content but also to report online hate crimes, including antisemitic hate speech, to the Federal Criminal Police. By law, authorities treated online threats the same as in person threats, and threats of rape and vandalism–whether online or in person–the same as threats of homicide. Nongovernmental organizations (NGOs) and journalists' organizations reported several cases of harassment or violence directed against journalists by police during the year, especially when covering demonstrations. Law enforcement, including the Federal Criminal Police Office, routinely raided homes, confiscated electronic devices, interrogated suspects and prosecuted individuals for the exercise of freedom of speech, including online. According to data from the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE), the country recorded 17,007 hate crimes in 2023 (the latest year in which data was available), a significant increase compared to 8,585 in 2019. A substantial number of alleged hate crimes were online speech, though the OSCE's Office for Democratic Institutions and Human Rights criticized the lack of data collection or availability of specific details about prosecutions. On March 7, in anticipation of International Women's Day, police raided the homes of 45 individuals across the country as part of an effort to 'combat misogyny on the internet;' in the same effort, authorities searched and questioned 37 other individuals in the months leading up to the raids. Authorities accused these individuals of crimes ranging from advocating or threatening sexual violence against women to making comments about female politicians and generalized insults against women." (2024 Country Reports On Human Rights Practices: Germany, United States State Department). Europe Today. It was called the Licensing of the Press Act. Passed by the British Parliament in 1662, it was "An act for preventing the frequent abuses in printing seditious, treasonable and unlicensed books and pamphlets, and for regulating of printing and printing presses." Under the act, printing presses could not be established without notice given to the government, the government had the power to enter and search for unlicensed presses and printing, and offenders were subjected to severe fines and jail time. The wave of freedom sweeping across Britain in the seventeenth century, which saw John Locke's natural law doctrines, the 1688 Glorious Revolution and the passage of the 1688 Act of Toleration establishing religious freedom, culminated in 1695 with the refusal of the Parliament to renew the infamous Licensing of the Press Act, and what ensued was a nonstop period of free speech without precedent in history. Three hundred years after Britain's government licensers of speech were banished, the hand of censorship has returned to Europe. In the twenty first century, the king's messengers have been replaced by Marxist commissars of political correctness.

THE RED GUARDS OF PSYCHOTHERAPY

It is derived from the ancient Greek word psyche, which means soul, and therapeia, which means healing. It is called psychotherapy and it is the use of personal interaction to heal irrational thoughts, beliefs, emotions, desires and actions, and establish a state of mental health, well being, good character and human flourishing. It is talk therapy, the use of discussion, to resolve problems in living and functioning in the world of adult responsibility. The psychotherapist has a host of different names, he can be a psychologist, a psychiatrist, a mental health nurse, a clinical social worker, a marriage and family therapist and a professional counsellor, but his methods are always the same, and involve the use of reason and evidence to help his client overcome roadblocks on the path to human moral perfection. In the twenty first century, this noble profession seeking to cure the soul of the demons which may afflict it has been hijacked and flown into a netherworld of mental programming, conditioning and abuse. In the twenty first century, the psychotherapist's office has been transformed into a agitation, propaganda and recruitment center in the service of the number one gutter religion of our time. Rejecting the world of the rational psychotherapist, the world of the scientific method and the Enlightenment, this religion has collected human debris from the Devil's rainwater and run off and molded it into a global movement and army. This religion is known as Marxism, and in its twenty first manifestation of gender, race and class politics it has become a synonym and byword for the Western cultural and political establishment, and weaponized the psychotherapist as an agent of Marxist world revolution. Psychotherapy Today. Look at psychotherapy today and see the twenty first century edition of the Communist Manifesto on the office desk and table, pages burning, reducing the client to smoke and ashes. His mind had been incinerated and he has been robotized to serve the cause. Hear the proclamation that progressive psychotherapy promotes social justice for women, nonwhites, gays, lesbians, bisexuals, transgenders and the poor. It promotes moral relativism and its product multiculturalism. It advocates for Marxist ideas and beliefs. It advocates for Marxist economic justice and political justice. It advocates for Marxist internationalism. It advocates for Marxist race politics and ethnocentrism. It condemns capitalism as a regime of social and cultural oppression and marginalization of gays, lesbians, bisexuals and transgenders. It promotes race and ethnic prejudice in the name of cultural responsiveness. It promotes race politics, ethnic politics and cultural politics in the name of inclusion. It promotes the intersectional politics of black males, black women, black gays, black lesbians, black transgenders, black bisexuals and the black poor, united in a revolution to overthrow liberal democracy: "George Mason's Counseling Program trains counselors to promote the academic, socioemotional, mental health and well being of children, adolescents, and adults as well as become an advocate for social, economic, and political justice. School counselors and clinical mental health counselors transform the lives of individuals in the communities they serve. Mason's Counseling Program infuses values integral to the preparation of professional counselors—social justice, multiculturalism, internationalism, advocacy, and leadership—into its celebrated curriculum. Graduates are prepared to assume leadership roles; be proactive change agents; and become advocates for social, economic, and political justice. By working through interdisciplinary teams as well as infusing teaching, research, service, and professional practice, the Mason counseling program will prepare the next generation of counselors to serve the collective needs of individuals through local, national, and international contexts. Where will this program take you? Develop an understanding of and ability to function effectively within ethical guidelines. Understand the impact of social and cultural factors on marginalized populations and recognize opportunities to address social injustices. Understand factors that impact human development and culturally responsive strategies for promoting wellness throughout the life span. Learn how to facilitate career development. Build the skills to facilitate effective counseling relationships and the ability to conceptualize cases and plan interventions with clients/students from across intersections of identities. Understand group dynamics and how to facilitate racially, ethnically, and culturally inclusive groups. Utilize assessment appropriately within the counseling process. Understand research design and how to utilize data. Develop professional dispositions that are appropriate for professional counselors. Train preservice counselors to work in a school or clinical setting (or both)." (Counseling, School of Education, George Mason University, website). Psychotherapy Today. Look at psychotherapy today and hear the proclamation that psychotherapists must promote Marxist critical race theory, a theory which is critical of the Enlightenment ideas of universal truth, morality, human universalism and individual rights. Psychotherapists must advocate for racial segregration and the black will to power. Psychotherapists must reject the liberal principles of equal protection, equal opportunity and equal participation without regard to race. Psychotherapists must reject the liberal principle of free speech in favor of Marxist ideological lockstep. Psychotherapists must promote Marxist race and ethnicity identity politics. Psychotherapists must condemn capitalism as a regime of race and gender discrimination. Psychotherapists must promote race divisions, race conflicts and the extermination of whites by blacks. Psychotherapists must condemn capitalism as a regime of white colonial power. Psychotherapists must condemn whiteness as synonmous with capitalist, colonialist racism and as fit only for the gas chambers. Psychotherapists must condemn whites as members of an oppressor culture and hold every white person today responsible for the slavery which existed over a century ago, and expel him from the human race: "King's College London's (KCL) Doctorate in Clinical Psychology training course has been widely criticized in the press and media recently for organizing 'critical race theory inspired race segregated classes' for its trainees. According to Frederick Attenborough of the Free Speech Union, critics have warned that such classes, which are funded by the NHS, 'risk creating exclusionary environments, stifling dialogue, and undermining the principles of equal participation and free speech.' According to a report in the Daily Telegraph sources within KCL expressed concerns that the university was 'hooked on identity politics' with one critic saying 'wokeness was seeding racial divisions and turning students into victims.' The Daily Telegraph states that the race segregated sessions had 'allegedly ended up dividing white students and those from ethnic minorities into separate groups for discussion about race and identity.' Students from ethnic minority backgrounds were reported to be 'treated as ‘victims of the system’regardless of background.' On the other hand, ‘addressing whiteness’ classes for white students allegedly taught them that 'colonialism was their responsibility and that they personally must accept and correct the mistakes of their ancestors, regardless of where they come from.' According to the Telegraph some students reported finding the race segregated approach 'so alienating that it risked damaging relationships across racial lines.' Further claims were made that the 'addressing whiteness' teaching left some students with the impression that white people 'do not have any culture and all white people are culturally indifferentiable.' " (Clinical Psychology Course Under Fire For Black And White Thinking, Critical Therapy Antidote, January 29, 2025). Psychotherapy Today. Look at psychotherapy today and hear the proclamation that human sex has no relation to biological reality and can be changed at will by simple self identification. Psychotherapists must be religiously committed to the transgenderist dogma that sex is not immutable and must reject out of hand the evidence presented by human sex chromosomes. Psychotherapists must promote transgenderist pseudoscience and fraudulent medical treatments in the name of gender affirmation. Psychotherapists must reject one hundred years of scientific research establishing the genetic basis of human sex determination and advocate the use of puberty blockers and cross sex hormones for gender dysphoric psychotics rebeling against reality: "Readers of our articles are very well aware of the debate surrounding gender dysphoria and its treatment, especially among the current adolescent cohort. We have contributed to this debate, especially the one involving UKCP (UK Council for Psychotherapy) and its Memorandum of Understanding on Conversion Therapy. While the controversy around conversion therapy involving gender dysphoria appears to be far from over, ideologically committed psychotherapists have doubled down on a conspiracy of nonthinking. In their article A Letter from the Future to Ourselves, in Murmurations: Journal of Transformative Systemic Practice, Gail Simon, Gwyn Whitfield, Elizabeth Day, and Amanda Middleton argue for an unwavering commitment to gender self identification, challenging the UK Council for Psychotherapy’s (UKCP) 2023 statement, which differentiates between exploratory therapy and medical interventions such as puberty blockers and cross sex hormones. However, their article notably omits any discussion of the broader controversy surrounding these medical treatments, particularly their long term effects and ethical implications. This omission is significant, as it sidesteps the crucial question of whether automatic affirmation should take precedence over careful therapeutic inquiry." (A Critical Response To A Gender Affirmative Article, Critical Therapy Antidote, March 11, 2025). Psychotherapy Today. The use of psychiatry for political purposes has been a major subject of debate within the world psychiatric community during the second half of the twentieth century. The issue became prominent in the 1970s and 1980s due to the systematic political abuse of psychiatry in the Soviet Union, where approximately one third of the political prisoners were locked up in psychiatric hospitals. (Political Abuse Of Psychiatry—A Historical Overview by Robert van Voren). Psychological warfare. Thought control. Behavior modification. The politicization of mental health counselling. The weaponization of the mental health field. The planned destruction of the human mind. The manufacturing of Manchurian candidates has reached across the world, commencing in the former Communist Bloc and landing in the twenty first century in the psychotherapist's office.

GERMANY'S REDS BLOW UP THE ECONOMY

December 3, 1984, Bhopal, India. Forty five tons of a dangerous gas called methyl isocyanate escape from a Union Carbide plant. A cloud of death and destruction drifts over towns and villages and claims the lives of 20,000 people. The worst industrial accident in history, the Bhopal Gas Tragedy overwhelms doctors and hospitals as it darkens the region with barren trees and bloated animal carcasses, and casts a pall of mass funerals and cremations across the nation. In the twenty first century, the economic powerhouse of Europe has exploded and created a disaster breaking a new record. In contrast to the Bhopal accident, this explosion was planned and ranks as the worst planned industrial explosion in history. It was planned by the enemies of the nation working from within, and it has sent the nation spiraling into deindustrialization. In the twenty first century, the German economy has exploded from a bomb planted by the nation's cultural and political establishment, and the debris have buried its machine rooms for all time to come. The bomb is Marxist politics, and its explosion by popular demand signals the German people's hatred of the liberal freedom and civilization which for decades made their nation the crown jewel of postwar Europe. Explosion. Look at Germany today and see a nation in economic free fall, a nation descending at the speed of light on a mandate from the people. See unproductive workers paid stratospheric wages. See bureaucratic roadblocks to growth and innovation. See a nation whose manufacturing power is contracting to zero. See regulatory frameworks trap and kill their entrepreneurial victims. See people devoid of action, effort and initiative. See a green energy policy banish coal, oil and nuclear energy and create the highest energy prices in the world. See companies flee for their lives into lands of freedom and dynamism in Central and Eastern Europe: "For decades, Germany has been the economic engine of Europe, boasting the largest economy in the European Union (EU) and ranking third globally by nominal gross domestic product (GDP). However, in recent years the nation’s economic trajectory has faltered. Following two consecutive years of contraction, Germany faces significant structural and political challenges that will demand the next chancellor’s immediate attention. Germany’s industrial base, once the backbone of its economy, is eroding. Prominent German companies are relocating some production abroad, citing lower costs and fewer bureaucratic hurdles. Industrial production has declined steadily, with 2024 output at just 90 percent of 2015 levels. In stark contrast, Poland’s industrial production grew to 152 percent of its 2015 level, reflecting a broader shift of manufacturing capabilities to Central and Eastern Europe. Germany’s bureaucracy, often seen as a hallmark of precision and order, has increasingly become a barrier to innovation and economic dynamism. Complex regulatory frameworks and lengthy approval processes are stifling entrepreneurial initiatives, making it difficult for businesses to adapt swiftly to changing market conditions. Germany must reevaluate its energy policy. High energy prices, driven in large part by an overreliance on renewable energy sources without sufficient grid modernization and storage solutions, have burdened businesses and households alike. A robust industrial strategy is essential to bolster the competitiveness of Germany’s automotive manufacturing sector. Deregulation and streamlined bureaucracy are also urgently needed to inject greater dynamism into the German economy." (Germany’s Economy Has Gone From Engine To Anchor. Here’s What The Next Chancellor Faces by Piotr Arak). Explosion. Look at Germany today and see high energy prices produced by regressive, insufficient wind and solar energy. See unviable companies subsidized by the state, making work where there is no work to do. See the multiplying tentacles of a bureaucratic octopus grab hold of every business in the nation. See work weeks reduced to zero with full time pay in the name of achieving a work-life balance. See people retire at the prime of their lives and live on as parasites of the state. See businesses forced to open up their books, plans, profits and secrets to the state, and lie prostrate before a god called the Social Market: "The term recession refers to an economy that is shrinking. This has been happening in Germany for two years now, the only country in the European Union experiencing such a decline. In 2024, more companies closed than in the previous major financial and economic crisis in 2011. High electricity prices have meant that energy intensive industries have been hit especially hard. Germany's burgeoning bureaucracy is another major factor hampering business. In its spring report, the German Council of Economic Experts spoke of a 'period of considerable sluggishness' and practically ruled out a rapid recovery. The panel of economic experts is calling on the federal government to take a realistic view of the future. No attempts should be made to save jobs that are not viable in the long term, they wrote in their report. 'An economic policy that aims to stop structural change through subsidies cannot be successful in the long term,' said Monika Schnitzer, Chairwoman of the German Council of Economic Experts. Chancellor Friedrich Merz has repeatedly said that people in Germany need to work more. 'We cannot maintain prosperity with a four day week and a work-life balance,' he recently told the CDU Economic Council. He called for more flexible working hours and incentives for people to continue working voluntarily beyond retirement age. Despite numerous political initiatives, the burden of bureaucratic costs on companies has not yet decreased noticeably. The experts suggest speeding up application and approval procedures, and reducing disclosure obligations that companies have towards the state." (German Economy In Crisis: When Will It Bounce Back? by Sabine Kinkartz). Explosion. Look at Germany today and see a nation under attack by Marxist terrorists and saboteurs. See Marxists set fire to intercity, interregional and international passengers, trains, freight, and signaling and safety systems, disrupting and destroying lives and property. See Germany's global industrial economy blown up by cables carrying the bombs of Marxist revolution. See leftwing extremists power a machine of primitivism and run the violence of Stone Age across the length and breadth of the nation. See Marxist commandos loaded with rifles of hatred and rage seek delay, divert and destroy the high speed lines of German growth, production and resource extraction. See Marxist ideologues, purists and high priests launch a campaign to dissassemble Germany's nuclear power plants, industrial society and human civilization: "Railways in Germany have experienced days of massive disruption after a track bottleneck on the national network was found to have been sabotaged two days in a row, with a left ultraanarchist group taking responsibility for what they called a strike against the global industrial economy. Thousands of international, intercity and regional trains were disrupted, and many tens of thousands of passengers and freight consignments were hampered after a fire was set in the cabling trough that runs beside the mainline on Thursday, rendering the signaling and safety system inoperative and trains totally unable to run. National rail company Deutsche Bahn said damage was significant and repairs of a 60 meter stretch of cables would last until the following day. Yet a second fire was subsequently discovered on another stretch of cabling on the same railway on Friday, pushing repairs into the weekend. he fires took place on the Ruhr Axis high speed line connecting Dusseldorf, Dusseldorf International Airport, and Duisburg in western Germany's North Rhine-Westphalia (NRW). As well as local trains, high speed intercity lines connecting Berlin, Frankfurt, north and south Germany, and the Netherlands were all impacted with 'massive' disruption, reports WDR. Police say they are investigating deliberate sabotage, and NRW interior minister, Herbert Reul, said at a press conference: 'Based on our authorities' current assessment and understanding of this act of sabotage, it was left wing extremists who are trying to bomb us back to preindustrial times.' While police haven't yet said they are sure it is genuine, a letter claiming responsibility for the fires was published in the usual way on the infamous left extremist scene bulletin board Indymedia by the creatively named Kommando Angry Birds. Stating they want to 'switch off the system of destruction,' the Kommando said in their note: 'The Rhine-Alpine Corridor connects some of Europe's most important economic centers: Rotterdam, Amsterdam, Duisburg, Cologne, Frankfurt, Mannheim, Basel, Zurich, Milan, and Genoa. The Duisburg-Dusseldorf-Cologne region is one of its many bottlenecks.' The disruption caused has a direct impact on the economy by delaying and diverting freight and passenger trains, they said. The Indymedia network hosts several messages professing to be by the Kommando group, which admit to years of repeated railway sabotages and, by dribs and drabs, expressing a world view radically against economic growth, factory production, and resource extraction. Past 'confession letters' by the Kommando mock the radical left former Minister for Economic Affairs and Climate Action, Robert Habeck, who oversaw the final disassembly of Germany's nuclear power plants, as insufficiently ideologically pure and explain why modern 'industrial society' needs to be utterly destroyed." program for ending the menace of German aggression consists, in its simplest terms, of depriving Germany of all heavy industries. The reason for selecting heavy industries is that with them Germany can quickly and terribly convert once more to war. Without them, no matter how savage her aggressive aims may be, she cannot make war. The specific factories which will always be a threat to peace in German hands are: 1. The Metals Group. 2. The Chemical Group. 3. The Electrical Group. In deindustrializing Germany, the factories taken from her would be rebuilt in other parts of Europe. (Germany Is Our Problem by Henry Morgenthau). The deindustrialization of Germany and the enslavement and murder of its people. Condemned by Winston Churchill as an insane and unworkable plan in which "England would be chained to a dead body," United States Secretary of Treasury Henry Morgenthau's postwar plan for Germany was not carried out. In the twenty first century, it has been carried out. Condemning scientific and technological civilization as a "system of destruction," Germany's Marxist cultural and political establishment has sent the clock of the nation racing backward into the year zero.

THREE AXES FELLING AMERICA

The outbreak of hostilities in April 1775, at Concord and Lexington, released all the pent up fury of the British adherents against the hated tokens of insurgency. Fittingly enough, Boston's Liberty Tree, progenitor of the numerous brood, fell as the first prey, the beleaguered redcoats 'with malice diabolical' hacking it down in August. (Liberty Tree: A Genealogy by Arthur Schlesinger, New England Quarterly, 1952). The Boston Liberty Tree. Symbol of American resistance to tyranny. A message post for words of revolution. The site of an effigy of Andrew Oliver, British agent of the Stamp Act which taxed paper products in the colonies without their consent, and imposed taxation on Americans without representation in the British Parliament. The first site of a banner having nine red and white stripes, a forerunner of the American flag. In August 1775, the Boston Liberty Tree was chopped down by British forces at the start of the American Revolutionary War. Watered by the blood of patriots, the tree grew back, and grew back bigger and stronger than ever, and would spread its branches across the New World. One hundred and fifty years after the Boston Liberty Tree was chopped down, it was chopped down again, but this time by enemies of the nation operating from within. In the twentieth century, American liberty was felled by the people of America who had descended into a moral sewer and embraced religion. They embraced the number one gutter religion of our time, which had collected the human debris of rancor and discontent and molded it into an army, a movement and a revolution. This religion is called Marxism, and it galvanized the American people as it galvanized people throughout the West who had become fearful of freedom and self responsibility. In the twentieth century, Marxism in its Hitlerian, Aryan, and gender, race and class manifestations became the prevailing orthodoxy of the West, and a synonym and byword for the Western cultural and political establishment. In the twenty first century, the American people voted another religion into power, a religion which ruled the Western Dark Ages one thousand year before, a religion whose Holy Bibles have made an ignominious comeback in the corriders of American cultural and political power. In the twenty first century, the American people in overwhelming numbers have given their support to three religions, Marxism, fascism and Christianity, and the people occupy three camps which confront a common enemy: the world of the Enlightenment for which Americans shed their blood in the Revolutionary War. Three camps, the Marxists, the fascists and the Christians, the first two demanding human sacrifice on the altars of social tribes and the last demanding human sacrifice on the altar of God in Heaven, are battling each other for the control of the nation. Three camps, the first two promoting a mysticism of socialism on earth and the last promoting a mysticism of otherworldly supernaturalism, have dug the grave of American civilization. Look at them and see the death of a society once known as the City Upon a Hill and the death of Western civilization. Marxists. Look at Marxists in America today and see racist admissions policies established at universities. See the practice of overt and illegal discrimination on the basis of race and sex. See the denial of individual physical existence in favor of mystical group existence. See the reduction of individuals to gender, race and class abstractions. See the establishment of race and gender diversity policies in place of race blind and gender blind individual assessment. See racist and sexist selection procedures justified in the name of equity and inclusion. See the violation of students' civil rights by considerations of race and sex in higher education admissions decisions. See the decomposition of society into warring race, gender and class groups. See more qualified white male students passed over in favor of less qualified black female students. See race and sex discrimination against white male student applicants justified in the name of "holistic assessment" and "plus factors." See student bodies created on the basis of demographic representation in place of individual talents and abilities. See universities value student skin color over student achievement in the selection of candidates. See rampant race and gender student preferencing in place of rewarding of hard working applicants. See institutions of higher education recruit and train students on the basis of their skin color. See university applicant pools, enrollments, and students in graduate and professional programs chosen on the basis of race and gender group membership. See academic excellence and meritocracy sacrificed on the altars of Marxist race and gender politics: "President Donald Trump on Thursday signed a memorandum aimed at stopping race based admissions policies once and for all by ordering colleges and universities that receive federal funds to provide expansive data about how they accept applicants. The memo reads: 'This Memorandum requires higher education institutions to submit the data necessary to verify that their admissions do not involve unlawful discrimination. It will also provide the public with a more holistic view of the factors these institutions consider in admissions,' it continues. 'American students, parents, and taxpayers should have confidence that our Nation's institutions of higher education are recruiting and training our next generations with fairness and integrity.' The memo specifically directs Secretary of Education Linda McMahon to revamp and streamline how data from universities is collected, and to 'expand the scope of required reporting for institutions' admissions data in order to provide adequate transparency.' The memo further instructs McMahon to 'increase accuracy checks' for the data that institutions submit, and to take remedial action if colleges and universities fail to submit data in a timely manner or submit incomplete or inaccurate data. After President Trump signed the memo, Secretary McMahon announced that she has directed the National Center for Education Statistics (NCES) to collect admissions data from colleges and universities. The Department of Education said institutions of higher education will now be required to report data 'disaggregated by race and sex relating to their applicant pool, admitted cohort, and enrolled cohort at the undergraduate level and for specific graduate and professional programs.' The data will include information about applicants' and admitted students academic achievements, such as standardized test scores and GPAs. 'Following the revelations of rampant racial preferencing in college admissions exposed by SFFA v. Harvard, the Trump Administration is now standardizing reporting from colleges and universities to provide full transparency into their admissions practices. It should not take years of legal proceedings, and millions of dollars in litigation fees, to elicit data from taxpayer funded institutions that identifies whether they are discriminating against hard working American applicants,' McMahon said in a statement. 'Going forward, universities will be required to provide this data directly to us through an existing data system. We will not allow institutions to blight the dreams of students by presuming that their skin color matters more than their hard work and accomplishments,' she continued. 'The Trump Administration will ensure that meritocracy and excellence once again characterize American higher education.' " (Trump Issues Memo Requiring Universities To Submit Data On Admissions Practices by Katherine Hamilton). Fascists. Look at fascists in America today and see promotion of ethnic and racial discrimination in the name of white Aryan power. See the promotion of Aryan socialism in place of black socialism. See the promotion of state control over the economy in the name of national and social interests. See the rejection of the Enlightenment notion of universal natural rights in favor of racial and ethnic supremacy. See the rejection of the Soviet red star flag of proletarian socialism and the twenty first century rainbow flags of race, gender and sexual orientation socialism, and a new mass marching under the swastika flags of American, national socialist, white power. See the rejection of liberalism and libertarianism in favor of of white, European, ethnic chauvinism. See the rejection of Marxist gender, race and class identity politics in favor of white nationalist identity politics. See the rejection of race and gender discrimination on behalf of blacks and women in favor of race discrimination on behalf of Aryans and white Americans. See the promotion of hatred of nonwhite immigrants. See the rejection of the foundational beliefs of America, the beliefs in the rights, freedoms and dignity of the individual which government is tasked with protecting, in favor of a movement of group rights, nationalist feeling and a passionate commitment to the destruction of liberal democracy: "Nationalism has become a dominant ideology on the American political right and has gained ground in many European countries over the last decade. This has happened without sufficient attention to the dangers inherent in nationalism—dangers evident in theory and in practice in this latest iteration of nationalism as well as prior ones. Nationalism is particularly dangerous in a diverse nation like the United States, where it is likely to exacerbate conflict. The ideology is virtually impossible to separate from harmful ethnic and racial discrimination of a kind conservatives would readily condemn in other contexts. Like socialism, with which it has important similarities, nationalism encourages harmful government control over the economy. Nationalist ideology is at odds with America's foundational principles, which are based on universal natural rights, not ethnic particularism. In crucial ways, nationalism is just socialism with different flags and more ethnic chauvinism. All Americans, but especially traditional conservatives, classical liberals, and libertarians, should recognize nationalism's dangers and recommit instead to the core principles of our founding. Nationalism's implication of identity based discrimination has reemerged among some conservative nationalists today. The popularity of the 'great replacement' theory (the notion that nefarious elites are using nonwhite immigrants to replace native born Americans) on much of the right is the most blatant example. One of the lessons of history is that it is difficult to constrain nationalist passions once they have been kindled. Conservatives rightly point out the danger of stoking group antagonisms when it comes to left wing identity politics. But their own embrace of nationalism carries similar risks." (The Case Against Nationalism by Alex Nowrasteh and Ilya Simon). Christians. Look at Christians in America today and see a movement of Catholics and Evangelical Protestants write a landmark United States Supreme Court decision depriving women of the right to obtain an abortion. Under the influence of a movement which had been growing since the 1980s, the Court decided in 2022 that "The Constitution does not confer a right to abortion; Roe and Casey are overruled; and the authority to regulate abortion is returned to the people and their elected representatives." The Court decided that states are free to violate the constitutionally mandated separation between church and state and to declare that human personhood begins at the precise moment when a single sperm cell fuses with a single ovum and forms a single cell zygote. The Court decided that states are free to declare that human personhood appears at this moment of fertilization because human personhood is a mystical soul substance infused by God. The Court decided that states are free to declare that abortion is the murder of an actual human person because it prevents the mystical soul substance from inhabiting a human body. The Court decided that states are free to declare that those who obtain an abortion and those who perform an abortion are guilty of murder and must be punished under criminal law. America Today. Over the past one hundred years, three Americas have emerged from the cauldron of rising religions. They have emerged from an ideological pot boiling over the open flames of antireason. They have emerged from a nation in a state of moral and spiritual free fall fueled by the treason of the people. Three Americas, a Marxist America, a fascist America and a Christian America, having nothing in common beyond the name with the founding Enlightenment America whose rifle blasts of liberty were heard around the world. Three Americas, three horsemen of the apocalypse, three Grim Reapers sent from Satan's underground below the noonday of sanity, three religious movements fighting for the control of society in the late Western age of civilizational collapse.

IMMANUEL KANT'S MULTICULTURALISTS

Germany calling! Germany calling! This is Hamburg radio, station Bremen! Thus began an English language propaganda radio program broadcast by the Third Reich to Britain and North America during World War II. Known as Lord Haw Haw, the presenters sought to discourage and demoralize the audience by reporting on the shooting down of Allied aircraft, the sinking of Allied ships, and losses incurred by Allied forces, and to induce the Allies to agree to peace terms leaving Hitler in power. Violent, vitriolic and inflammatory, the broadcasts were Germany's voices of terror seeking to bring down darkness and night on the free world. In the eighteenth century, during the heyday of the Enlightenment, a philosopher was active who declared war on the age around him and championed the doctrine of subjectivism, and his doctrine would go on to become the West's philosophic voice of terror. The Age of Enlightenment was a movement championing common sense and human sanity, affirming the existence of physical objects and the validity of the empirical scientific method. Affirming that the nature of physical objects is known through sense experience, its leading lights were Galileo Galilei, Johannes Kepler, Francis Bacon, Pierre Gassendi, Christiaan Huygens and Isaac Newton, and this movement was a shining jewel in the crown of the West. The great philosophic opponent of this age is the most influential and discussed philosopher in modern times. When Immanuel Kant proclaimed his mission, "I have found it necessary to deny knowledge in order to make room for faith," he issued a clarion call to the psychotics of the West to rise up and overthrow the Enlightenment. To deny knowledge: no more brazen statement of psychosis was ever made by a philosopher. To deny knowledge: no more shameless statement was ever made by a philosopher of hatred toward the human mind. To deny knowledge: a goal as plain as daylight, with no attempt at concealment, to instal the Grim Reaper claiming human progress and civilization upon the throne of absolute power. The preeminent philosopher of the West, who gave voice to Western subjectivism as clearly and unequivocally as his counterpart Aristotle gave voice to Classical realism and common sense philosophy, Immanuel Kant set into motion movements of subjectivism whose bitter fruit would include the waves of crime and violence engulfing the present day. The voice of terror: telling people who uphold common sense and human sanity to lay down their arms and surrender to the enemy. The voice of terror: telling people that truth is relative to the human race and human consciousness and there is nothing to constrain the human will in heaven or on earth. Listen to Kant and listen to his students, the voices of terror, growing from the seeds he planted, and hear the death bell toll for Western civilization. Immanuel Kant. Listen to Kant proclaim that the world of physical objects is a universal, collective delusion produced by human perception. Man is blind because he has eyes and sees nothing when he sees something. The common sense doctrine of realism, which affirms the existence of physical objects which man directly perceives, must be replaced by the doctrine of idealism and its subjective theory of perception: "I understand by the idealism of all appearances the doctrine that they are all together to be regarded as mere representations and not things in themselves, and accordingly that time and space are only subjective forms of perception, not determinations given for themselves or conditions of objects as things in themselves. To this idealism is opposed realism, which regards space and time as something given in themselves independent of our perception." (Critique Of Pure Reason). Listen to Kant proclaim that philosophy must reject the traditional, common sense belief that human perception perceives something, and must affirm the opposite, that physical objects are in fact produced by and conform to human perception, and physical objects are in fact unreal: "Hitherto it has been assumed that all our knowledge must conform to objects. But all attempts to extend our knowledge of objects by establishing something in regard to them apriori, or by means of concepts independently of experience, have on this assumption ended in failure. We must therefore discover whether we may not have more success in the tasks of metaphysics if we suppose that objects must conform to our knowledge." (Critique Of Pure Reason). Listen to Kant proclaim that human perception determines, orders and relates the illusions and appearances which the ignorant call physical objects: "Matter is a mere appearance and is that which is sensed and perceived. Form is that which so determines, orders and related these material appearances." (Critique Of Pure Reason). The Voice of Terror. Now listen to Kant's students proclaim that truth is relative to gender, race, class and culture. The belief in the existence of physical objects is a product of Western ways of knowing and has no objective validity. The belief in the existence of physical objects is a Western conceit. All socalled knowledge is an instrument of political needs and interests. The belief in the existence of physical objects is a product of the capitalist class interests. The search for knowledge employing the method of empiricism is a product of Western colonialism. All forms of hermeneutics, or literary interpretation, are subjective. Empirical science is an arbitrary belief system no more valid than any other belief system. Empirical science possesses no greater validity than Islamic mysticism. The belief in the primacy of reason over religion is a product of Western ethnocentrism. There is no such thing as an objective, universal science, and science is a product of race, and there is an Aryan science and a Jewish science. The belief in the existence of genes and chromosomes is a product of bourgeois science and has no place in proletarian science. The fact that the proletarian science rejecting the existence of genes and chromosomes led to massive crop failures and famine in the former Communist Bloc possesses no moral importance because politically correct science represents a great leap forward in human thought. The Enlightenment notion of human essentialism and universalism must be rejected in favor racial and ethnic particularism and war. The Enlightenment notion of empirical science is a product of white racism, white European ethnicity and white capitalist oppression and must be rejected in favor of primitive mystical apriorism: "Despite the overwhelming success of the scientific methods developed in Europe from the sixteenth to the eighteenth centuries, the critics of Western culture still insist that truth is relative. Western knowledge is only one kind of knowledge and Western methodologies are only one of the 'ways of knowing.' There are a number of sources of this cognitive relativism but the most popular is that of the French Nietzschean theorist, Michael Foucault, who argues that truth and objectivity are Western conceits. All knowledge is bound by culture, he claims. Within each culture, knowledge is generated for political purposes. Hence, Western knowledge is politically beholden to the powerful. To signify this interconnectivity, Foucault calls it 'power/knowledge.' This is a congenial argument for postcolonial historians. They believe that Western empirical methods were among the forces that subjugated the Orient, so they regard empiricism and its quest for objective knowledge as a form of imperialism. This is why they are so enamored of the subjective hermeneutics, or literary interpretations, that prevail in postmodernism and cultural studies. Objectivity equals domination; subjectivism equals intercultural equality and respect. If taken seriously, this means that science can no longer be regarded as a universal method for discovering truths. Moreover, it means that any reasonably coherent doctrine or body of beliefs can produce truths of its own. Science is thus reduced to one belief system among many. This view is especially popular within the fields of cultural studies and the sociology of knowledge where science is invariably termed 'Western science,' in order to differentiate it from its ostensible competitors. As one of Australia's leading academic sociologists, R. W. Connell, has put it. The idea that Western rationality must produce universally valid knowledge increasingly appears doubtful. It is, on the face of it, ethnocentric. Certain Muslim philosophers point to the possibility of grounding science in different assumptions about the world, specifically those made by Islam, and thus develop the concept of Islamic science. This claim, however, is no different from some of the more grotesque historical examples of relativism in science: for instance, the conflict between 'Aryan' and 'Jewish physics,' which set back German science under the nazi regime, and the claims by the Marxist plant geneticist, T. D. Lysenko, to have developed a 'proletarian' approach to science, in opposition to 'bourgeois' science. The application of Lysenko's methods to agriculture not only produced a series of disastrous crop failures in the USSR in the 1930s and 1940s, but was partly responsible for the Chinese famine of 1958-62, the worst in human history, which caused the deaths of between thirty and forty million people during the socalled Great Leap Forward. One can only wish that, instead of deploying armaments produced by Western technology, the present armed forces and terrorist cells of some Islamic countries heed the advice of the postcolonial theorists and adopt the inventions of Muslim science instead." (The Cultural War On Western Civilization by Keith Windschuttle). The Voice of Terror. The word brazen has two meanings. It means bold and without shame, and it means made of brass or resembling brass in sound, color or strength. Kant's denial of the possibility of human knowledge instantiates the two meanings of brazen. It was bold and shameless, and it produced a brassy, metallic sound which grew louder and stronger with every passing decade. This was the sound of violence. Excusing mass murdering Muslim jihadists African witchcraft and cannibalism, and the human sacrifices practiced in ancient Inca, Aztec and North American cultures, Kant's multiculturalists have sent decibel levels of violence soaring into the stratosphere in the twenty first century final act of the West.

MARXISTS MAKE LAW IN BRITAIN

At the United States Library of Congress is a mosaic representing the law. It depicts a woman on a throne holding a sword to punish the guilty and a palm branch to protect the innocent. Her head is surrounded by a halo of glory and her shield of Minerva is the shield of wisdom and righteousness. No person is above the law. The principle that all people are subject to the same laws has been accepted by civilized societies for thousands of years and is a bedrock principle of rational jurisprudence. Listen to the Mahabharata proclaim that even the king must be advised and guided by the law: "The people should execute a king who does not protect them, but deprives them of their property and assets and who takes no advice or guidance from any one. Such a king is not a king but misfortune." Listen to the Upanishads proclaim that "The law is the king of the kings. No one is higher than the law. Not even the king." Listen to Aristotle proclaim that the rulers of the state are the servants of the law: "It is more proper that law govern than any one of the citizens. Upon the same principle, if it is advantageous to place the supreme power in some particular persons, they should be appointed to be only guardians, and the servants of the laws." (Politics). Listen to the British House of Commons proclaim to King James I in 1610: "Among many other points of happiness and freedom which your majesty's subjects of this kingdom have enjoyed under your royal progenitors, there is none which they have accounted more dear and precious than this: to be guided and governed by the rule of the law which gives both to the rulers and the ruled that which by right belongs to them, and not by any uncertain or arbitrary form of government." In the twenty first century, in the nation whose Magna Carta and philosophers such as John Locke inspired the world with their defense of the rule of law, the rule has been abolished by the majority and replaced by the terrifying principle of selective enforcement. It has been abolished by the cultural and political establishment, taking orders from the people, and replaced by the enforcement of the number one gutter religion of our times, whose channels have collected the human debris of discontent and formed them into an army, a movement and a revolution. In the twenty first century, the British house of law and liberty, built up and consolidated over a period of one thousand years, commencing with the ninth century Anglo-Saxon King Alfred the Great, whose world famous code proclaimed that the same law must be applied to all people, rich or poor, friends or enemies, has been razed to the ground by the bulldozers of Marxism. In the twenty first century, a Marxist monster with three gorgon heads, marked gender, race and class, has transformed Britain into a tyranny for the enforcement of political correctness, and rendered the equality of all persons before the law null and void. In the twenty first century, the nation whose statutes and constitutional documents are written in the ink of fairness and justice for all has been transformed into a body of fanatics marching under the flags of Marxist language, commands and culture. Britain today. Look at Britain today and see the operation of a two tier justice system, one for Marxists and one for antiMarxists. See Marxists who promote violence against antiMarxists, condemning them as nazis and fascists, and threatening to cut their throats, protected in the name of freedom of speech. See antiMarxists who condemn migrant killers, thieves, vandals, rapists and drug dealers, and advocate their mass deportation and the burning down of their welfare hotels, arrested, tried, convicted and jailed for engaging in hate speech. See Marxist speech protected and the opponents of Marxism condemned as speech criminals. See threats of violence made by the supporters of transgenderism protected in the name of freedom of speech, and see the opponents of transgenderism subjected to police raids, hate speech prosecution, and massive fines and jail time. See Marxists who assault antiMarxists spared from jail, and see antiMarxists who assault Marxists sent to jail. See Marxist words and speech exempted from legal punishment, and see antiMarxist words and speech subjected to the full force of the law. See people who threaten and assault antiMarxists granted leniency and mitigation, and see people who threaten and assault Marxists deprived of all leniency and mitigation. See people who speak out against the nation's Marxist justice system and double standard in policing condemned as far right extremists, weavers of false narratives and fomenters of war and subjected to prosecution. See the government proclaim that Marxist words are constitutionally protected speech and antiMarxist words are violent crimes. See free speech protections granted to people whose views are politically and socially popular, and see people whose views are not expelled from the nation, from humanity and from the cosmos: "If there was ever any doubt about the existence of a two tier justice system in the UK, the case of Ricky Jones just eliminated it. Last Friday, a jury at Snaresbrook Crown Court in London cleared Jones, a now suspended Labor councillor, of encouraging violent disorder at a protest last August. Jones attended a counter demonstration in Walthamstow, London, in response to a planned right wing protest—one of many last summer, sparked by the Southport murders. Surrounded by his fellow protesters, Jones made an impassioned speech, captured on video, denouncing the far Right: 'They are disgusting nazi fascists. We need to cut all their throats and get rid of them all.' At this point, Jones drew his finger across his own throat. The clip subsequently went viral, and Jones was soon arrested and charged. He pleaded not guilty and, a year later, faced a jury of his peers who decided he had not committed any crime. Jones, rightly, walked free. Words are not violence and should not be treated as such. Contrast this with the example of Lucy Connolly. Despite being arrested and charged at almost the same time, for very similar actions, the outcome for her was completely different. Connolly, a childminder, mother, and wife of a former Conservative councillor, made a post on X in response to the incident in Southport, when teenager Axel Rudakubana murdered three young girls at a Taylor Swift themed dance workshop. Connolly, who had lost a child herself, wrote in the heat of the moment, believing as many others did that the killings had been committed by an immigrant: 'Mass deportation now, set fire to all the fucking hotels full of the bastards for all I care, while you're at it take the treacherous government and politicians with them. I feel physically sick knowing what these families will now have to endure. If that makes me racist so be it.' For this post, Connolly was arrested and charged with inciting racial hatred. Crucially, she pleaded guilty to this and, in October, was sentenced by a judge to 31 months in prison. Because of this decision to plead guilty, unlike Jones, Connolly did not get the opportunity to appear before a jury. Connolly, like so many other rioters and assorted 'speech criminals' during last summer's protests, was refused bail. Facing long delays before a trial and with a young daughter and chronically ill husband at home, Connolly likely entered her guilty plea in the hopes that it would allow her to be out of jail more quickly. Jones, meanwhile, aided by a top private solicitor rather than a public duty solicitor, was granted bail and had a full year to prepare for his trial. It's difficult to see this as anything other than two tier justice. After all, what meaningful difference is there between a childminder who writes on X that people can set fire to migrant hotels for all she cares and a Labor councillor who declares in front of a protesting crowd that right wingers deserve to have their throats cut? Why was Jones's ADHD treated as a more compelling mitigating factor than Connolly's history of child loss when faced with the news of murdered children? What Jones said was the same as, if not worse than, Connolly's tweet. Yet Jones will walk free, while Connolly is still serving an almost three year sentence, often confined to her cell with no privileges and treated unfairly by prison staff. If we care about free speech, then we ought to recognize that Jones did indeed get the verdict he deserved. But Connolly was denied that same decency. The reality is that, in the UK, the application of the law depends on your politics. This has been the case for some time now, predating even Keir Starmer's Labor government. In 2023, a man identifying as a transgender woman, calling himself Sara Jane Baker, gave a speech during a trans pride event in London, telling the crowd that: 'If you see a TERF [trans exclusionary radical feminist], punch them in the fucking face.' Baker—who was at the time out on license while serving a life sentence for attempted kidnap, torture and murder—was miraculously spared any legal punishment." (In The UK, Two Tier Justice Is Now Undeniable by Lauren Smith).

Britain today. At the capitalist farm of Mr Jones, the communist animals stage a revolt. The communist Beasts of England rename the property Animal Farm and adopt as their guiding commandment All animals are equal. The leader of the revolution, Comrade Napoleon, in his mission to establish a dictatorship of the leader over the people, abolishes the commandment and adopts a new one: All animals are equal, but some animals are more equal than others. George Orwell's classic allegory on the destruction of the rule of law in a Soviet type society provides a portrait of his native land in the twenty first century. In the twenty first century, the world of Britain is the world of Orwell's Animal Farm. The majority forms a communist party. It has abolished the rule of law. It is beyond the reach of the law. It has the right to spew out vitriol against anticommunists in the name of freedom of speech, and the right to assault anticommunists and deprive them of their rights in the name of combating hate. Anticommunists are rightless slaves of a Soviet type dictatorship of the party over the voices of liberal dissent. Granting the communist majority a green light to say and do whatever it pleases in the enforcement of gender, race and class politics, the new British nation, the new British communist party and the new British Animal Farm of the twenty first century has canceled one thousand years of British freedom.

MUSLIMS BURN DOWN FRANCE

Our Lady Of Paris. Construction began in 1160 and ended in 1260, and the result was a cathedral whose grandeur and beauty blaze in the crown of Western civilization. The Cathedral of Notre Dame, with its ribbed vaults, flying buttresses, stained glass rose windows, pipe organs and immense church bells, is not only the finest example of Gothic architecture but is a synonym and byword for France itself. On April 15, 2019, at 6:18 PM Central European Summer Time, a fire broke out at the cathedral and flames engulfed its wooden spire, wooden roof and its upper walls. After three years of reconstruction, the cathedral reopened on December 7, 2024 to the acclaim of the nation. The cathedral in fact caught fire at the dawn of the twenty first century and has been blazing ever since. Since the dawn of the century, the Cathedral of Notre Dame, the Human Rights Country, the Enlightenment Country, and the Declaration Of The Rights Of Man, glorious names, one and all, for the nation of France, has been on fire in a conflagration set by the enemies of the nation working from within. It was set by the people of France through their cultural and political establishment, and after a quarter century of burning, it has reduced the nation to smoke and rubble. The moral, spiritual and cultural fire consuming France was set by the number one gutter religion of our time, a religion flowing with the human debris of rancor and discontent, molding it into an army and revolution whose goal is the overthrow of liberal democracy. The fire was set by Marxism, and its tinder wood is another gutter religion, this one emanating from the East, and this comrade in arms of Marxism, this religion called Islam, has been burning down the free institutions of the nation for a quarter of a century, and has rendered the nation unrecognizable. The Flames of Islam. Look at France today and see Muslim youth gangs shut down cinemas. See Muslims set up no go zones excluding Western culture. See a vast Muslim population advance into families, homes, neighborhoods, schools, offices and businesses. See masked, hooded Muslims disrupt and attack the critics of Islam. See academics exposing the Muslim Brotherhood as a terror organization seeking to establish a global Muslim regime, subjected to violent protests and intimidation, and forced to obtain lifetime police protection. See the Muslim Brotherhood infiltrate primary and secondary schools and force students to study Muslim texts and support the death penalty for nonbelievers. See the Muslim Brotherhood infiltrate community shops, private education, dating websites, job search companies, personal development services, local sports groups and youth outreach programs. See the Muslim Brotherhood infiltrate care homes for children and recruit them for drug trafficking and terror attacks. See the Muslim Brotherhood operate mosques, Quran schools, and Muslim charities and cultural associations, and train their members to stir up trouble in the streets and commit crimes against people and property. See the Muslim Brotherhod divert European Union funds to finance a fifth column advancing the conquest of the West. See the people of France accept Islam as the preeminent religion of the nation. See the Muslim Brotherhood launch terror attacks on Jews and synagogues. See Muslim riots, radicalization and revolution defended in the name of multiculturalism. See Muslims place French society under sharia. See urban districts and suburban regions taken over by Muslims. See mosques spread Muslim agitation and propaganda throughout the length and breadth of the land. See the formation of a parallel Muslim nation hosting institutions, networks and practices of subversion. See a community of Muslim disease agents infect secular society and establish compulsory veils for women, beards for men, Islamic dress for everybody, prayers at sports matches, prayer rooms in changing rooms, and universal fasting during Ramadan. See Muslim lobby groups dominate the corridors of power. See the critics of Islam condemned as a far right fringe group. See the critics of Islam condemned as racist, Islamophobic hate mongers. See the critics of Islam condemned as the victimizers of Islam. See Muslims massacre people criticizing the Prophet Mohammed. See Muslims behead people showing images of the Prophet Mohammad. See Muslims abolish the liberal distinction between church and state and transform the state into a Muslim congregation. See Muslims abolish free speech and a secular society. See Muslims infiltrate schools and reduce pupils to programmed killer robots. See academics criticizing Islam prevented from teaching and subjected to round the clock harassment. See academics criticizing Islam condemned as zionist racists and forced to leave the campus and to flee for their lives. See Muslims blockade universities across the nation. See Muslims and Marxists in university faculties force students to support Palestine, Hamas and Hezbollah. See academics who reveal that a large number of Muslim suicide attacks are committed by women condemned as sexist. See academics exposing the new radical Muslim regime in Syria condemned as supporters of Bashar al-Assad. See the French government surrender to terror, recognize Palestinian statehood and promote a launch area for the annihilation of Israel. See Muslims enforce Islam in every private and public sector and space in society. See Muslims frighten and coerce people into accepting Islam. See Muslims place political power in the service of Islam and a construct a barbed wire fence around freedom of conscience and thought: "Move over, Salman Rushdie, Michel Houellebecq, and Ayaan Hirsi Ali. Islamists have a new bete noire—Barbie. In a Paris suburb, a gang of Muslim youths managed to shut down a screening of Barbie, the PG rated 2023 movie, because it apparently endorses homosexuality. The incident took place in Noisy-le-Sec, located in the immigrant heavy Seine-Saint-Denis département. On Saturday, the local council had planned to show Barbie as part of an outdoor cinema program for people living in deprived areas. But 15 young people stopped the event from going ahead by threatening council workers and trying to smash equipment. According to local mayor Olivier Sarrabeyrouse, the Muslims claimed the film 'promoted homosexuality and insulted the image of women.' Sarrabeyrouse has since filed a criminal complaint and rescheduled the movie, remarking, 'There is no cultural no go zone in Noisy-le-Sec.' Except there is a cultural no go zone in Noisy-le-Sec, as there are in many parts of France. The Barbie cancellation is by no means an isolated incident. France has the largest Muslim population of any European country, making up between 7% and 10% of the country's 67 million inhabitants. As a result, France is often held hostage by vocal, radical Muslims. Back in May Fabrice Balanche, a professor specializing in the Middle East, was interrupted and attacked in the middle of his lecture at Lumiere University Lyon 2 by a group of masked, hooded protestors, who were demonstrating against the university's ban on holding an iftar (Ramadan fast breaking meal) on campus. A similar incident took place in February, when Florence Bergeaud-Blackler, a well known anthropologist, received death threats and was subsequently deplatformed because she planned to give a lecture on the Muslim Brotherhood at the University of Lille. She is now under permanent police protection. Islamists have also infiltrated France on a systematic level. Earlier this year, a much needed report by two senior civil servants found that the Muslim Brotherhood, an international Islamist network, has been building 'ecosystems at the local level to structure the lives of Muslims from birth till death.' Interior minister Bruno Retailleau stressed that 'below the radar Islamism is trying to infiltrate institutions, whose ultimate aim is to tip the whole of French society under sharia law.' In response, President Emmanuel Macron presented measures last month to deal with entryism, proposing a law that would increase administrative and financial sanctions for organizations supported by the Brotherhood and decrease opportunities for the foreign funding of mosques, societies and cultural institutions that spread Islamist propaganda. In cities across France—particularly in Lille, Lyon, and Marseille—there exists a sort of parallel Islamic society. Sporting associations, schools, and even local governments have been taken over by Islamists. This ecosystem is used to enforce religious observance among the Muslim population, such as veiling for women, wearing beards for men, dressing in Islamic clothing, and fasting during Ramadan. In many sporting clubs, players are encouraged to pray before matches, and prayer rooms have been set up in changing rooms. The report even showed that groups connected to the Muslim Brotherhood had attempted to sway the European Union through lobbying. With Islamist influence running this deep, it's no wonder that local officials like Sarrabeyrouse end up caving to these demands. Bizarrely, Sarrabeyrouse seems to think that the 'far Right' is somehow responsible for the Barbie furore, which he believes was 'hijacked by the Right.' 'Let's not be fooled,' he said. 'This is a dirty political manoeuver. An incident at Noisy has been taken over by the far right fringe to stigmatize a neighborhood.' Similarly, Les Inrockuptibles, a left leaning magazine, said, 'Politicians of the right and far right have leaped on the news to exploit it and use it for their games.' It is not, however, exploitation or hijacking to point out that this is a serious, ongoing problem in France. For far too long, the threat of Islamism has been swept under the rug by cries of 'Islamophobia' and 'racism.' " (France Is Being Held Hostage By Islamism by Lauren Smith). The Flames of Islam. Eastern Siberia, 2003. Wildfires sweep through the taiga forests and destroy twenty two million hectares of land. The worst wildfires in history, they spread across Siberia, the Russian Far East, northern China and northern Mongolia, and send a cloud of smoke as far as Kyoto, Japan, 3600 kilometers away. In their wake, the lands lie buried in smoke, water contamination, soil degradation and habitat destruction. In the twenty first century, France is burning. It is contaminated, degraded, devoid of human life and choking in smoke. It sends its plumes of cultural free fall drifting across the world. Look at it this conflagration and see a Palestinian state, a base of Muslim terror, a sewer of migrant Muslims, an iron heel of Muslim censorship and a scene of national suicide.

THE RICH VOTE FOR COMMUNISM

A virus is an infectious agent which reproduces inside the cells of an organism. Viruses infect all forms of life, are found in every ecosystem and are the most numerous type of life on earth. Once infected, the host cell is forced to produce thousands of copies of the virus, and unless the virus is killed, the organism will die. At the dawn of the twentieth century, a virus infected the West and has been multiplying without surcease ever since. It was introduced by a moral sickness within the host and in the twenty first century, it has overwhelmed and killed civilization. The moral sickness was the rejection of reason and the embrace of religion. It was the rejection of the Enlightenment with its method of empiricism, search for objective truth and support for freedom. The moral sickness was the worship of mysticism, collectivism and universal human enslavement. This moral sickness allowed the entrance of the number one gutter religion of our time, and in the twenty first century, this religion and virus has spread into every class and sector of society. This religion and virus is called Marxism, the doctrine which proclaims that reason does not exist, individuals do not exist, and freedom is an illusion, and that the class struggle, the struggle between mystical socioeconomic groups, is the driving force of human history. When the death bell began tolling for the West, the virus began spreading, and in the present day, it is everywhere. It is in the streets and sewers, from whence it arose, and it is in the corporate boardroom and executive suite. It lives among princes, paupers and everyone in between. It lives among the employed, the unemployed and the self employed. It lives among the rags and among the rich. It lives in classrooms, colleges and institutes of academic research. It lives in the mass media, cyberspace and the airwaves of the world. It lives in families, homes, neighborhoods, towns and countrysides. The naive are surprised at its infection of the billionnaire class, but its spread among the super rich is as real as its spread across the shop floor, and serves as a demonstration in clear and unequivocal terms of just how sick the West is in the twenty first century. The rich vote for communism. Look at today's rich and see them proclaim that wealth is not earned through hard work, effort, initiative or intelligence, and people who become rich have raided the wealth produced by the true working class. It is not right, not fair and not sustainable that those who produce wealth be allowed to keep what they produce. In a progressive society, individual freedom cannot and will not persist. Those who have produced great wealth must be expropriated in the name of establishing an inclusive economy. A progressive society has abolished the gap between the rich and the poor by abolishing the right to private property. People become rich on the backs of the poor, and when the producers rise the nonproducers fall, and this is unjust. The system of freedom does not work and the producers of wealth must be taxed out of existence in the name of inclusive capitalism. A progressive society is public minded and not private minded, and establishes enslavement to the state in place of the freedom of the individual. A progressive society establishes communism in the name of long term investing. A progressive society establishes communism in the name of protecting the planet. A progressive society establishes communism in the name of the global proletariat. A progressive society foments class war and abolishes private wealth and inequality in the name of the rights of the unskilled, the indolent and the nonproducers: "When the billionaire merchandizing mogul Johann Rupert gave a speech at the recent Financial Times' 'luxury summit' in Monaco, he sounded more like a Marxist theoretician than someone who made his fortune selling Cartier diamonds and Montblanc pens. Appearing before a crowd of executives from Fendi and Ferrari, Rupert argued that it wasn't right--or even good business--'for 'the 0.1 per cent of the 0.1 per cent' to raid the world's spoils. 'It's unfair, and it is not sustainable,' he said. For several years now, populist politicians and liberal [Marxist] intellectuals have been inveighing against income inequality, an issue that is gaining traction among the broader body politic, as shown by a recent New York Times/CBS News poll that found that nearly 60 per cent of US voters want their government to do more to reduce the gap between the rich and the poor. But in the past several months, this topic has been taken up by a different and unlikely group of advocates: a small but vocal band of billionaires. In March, for instance, Paul Tudor Jones II, the private equity investor, gave a TED talk in which he proclaimed that the divide between the top 1 per cent in the United States and the remainder of the country 'cannot and will not persist.' A few months earlier, Jeff Greene, a billionaire real estate entrepreneur, suggested on CNBC that the super rich should pay higher taxes in order to restore what he called 'the inclusive economy that I grew up in.' According to Chrystia Freeland, author of the 2012 book Plutocrats: The Rise Of The New Global Super Rich And The Fall Of Everyone Else, the phenomenon of the socially conscious billionaire is significant and good. 'It is absolutely happening,' Freeland said. 'After my book came out, a few billionaires quietly got in touch with me to say that they agreed that the current system isn't working. It makes sense that the people who have benefited most from the economy have the greatest interest in making it sustainable.' Freeland, who is also a Liberal Party member of the Canadian Parliament, pointed to the socalled Conference on Inclusive Capitalism, organized in London last year by Lynn Forester de Rothschild, a member of the storied Rothschild banking clan. While the one day event was derided by some as a nervous hedge against the threat of insurrection, the ostensible purpose of the gathering was to reorient the 1 per cent toward public minded goods such as long term investing, environmental stewardship and the fate of the global working class. Financiers such as George Soros and Warren Buffett have trod this ground before to great attention, but now that other billionaires have been moved to join them, it has helped to change the conversation, said Darrell West, a scholar at the Brookings Institution and the author of Billionaires: Reflections On The Upper Crust. 'The messenger matters,' West said. 'When people of modest means complain about inequality, it usually gets written off as class warfare, but when billionaires complain, the problem is redefined'–in a helpful way, he added–'as basic fairness and economic sustainability.' " (Those Weird Billionaires Who Are Turning Into Marxists by Alan Feuer).

The rich vote for communism. Look at the rich today and see them proclaim that a progressive society brings together government, business and all people everywhere to establish communism and improve the state of the world. A progressive society traps private wealth behind national borders and places it under political control. Those who produce wealth are a threat to democracy and must be expropriated. Those who produce wealth are members of an oligarchy and must be overthrown. Those who produce wealth have blackened society with their wealth. Capitalism is a regime in which the producers of wealth get richer and richer and the nonproducers of wealth get poorer and poorer, and this is inequitable and the regime must be overthrown. The producers of wealth must be excluded from politics, media ownership and civil society, and be exterminated as enemies of the people: "I have joined more than 370 millionaires from 22 countries in signing a letter calling on our political leaders to tackle the cost of extreme wealth by taxing the super rich–people like me. The letter has been delivered to the World Economic Forum in Davos, where more than 60 heads of state have gathered. That includes Donald Trump, who will join virtually today–days after his inauguration. Borge Brende, WEF's president, said Davos would be a 'very special moment.' I hope it will–after all this event's mission is 'to bring together government, businesses and civil society to improve the state of the world.' Perhaps then, it's time for leaders to put their money where their mouths are. But I won't hold my breath. What we're seeing now is a new phenomenon: it's what happens when countries tolerate extreme wealth, wealth and activities that exist beyond borders and control. This increasing concentration of wealth and power is now plainly toxic to democracy. In his farewell address, Joe Biden warned an oligarchy was taking shape in the US. And it looks like it's heading our way next. What episode of Black Mirror are we living in? And the rich are getting richer: billionaire wealth surged by two trillion dollars last year, roughly $5.7bn a day, three times faster than the year before, while the number of people living in poverty has barely changed since 1990. They are numbers most people can’t comprehend, but it’s a clear warning that the gap between rich and everyone else is growing and the wealthiest are bankrolling politics and media (social and conventional)–gobbling up democracy as they go. Our futures are being sold to those with the most money–those in some ways, with all the money. Just a handful of people own more money than billions of us. The new untouchables. Something needs to be done. Media ownership reform is one thing. Social media controls need to have teeth. And politics needs to be publicly funded–we need to end the role of donors in our politics. So that the super rich don’t have an option to control our democracies." (Tax The rich–Do It Now. Start With Me by Dale Vince). The rich vote for communism. How long an individual can spread a virus depends on three factors: how sick the individual is, the state of the individual's immune system, and the duration of the sickness. Proclaiming that the money possessed by the rich is money taken from society which must be returned to society, today's rich class is a symptom of a severe moral sickness afflicting the West. It is sickness which confronts no immune system to fight it and has changed society forever.
